FIVE NATIONS PROTEST U. S. LIQUOR RULING

More Orders Vetoed By Mayor Donovan

MORE ORDERS CALLING FOR TRANSFER OF MONEY FROM PRIOR REVENUE ACCOUNT VETOED BY MAYOR DONOVAN

The fourth and fifth majority votes of the year were sent to the city council today by Mayor John J. Donovan when he returned without his approval two orders calling for the transfer of $16,500 from prior revenue account, so-called, for the purpose of sanitary improvements at the Moody and Seymour street schools and for paying a portion of Lawrence street, between the Concord river bridge and and Billerica street. Both orders were introduced in the council by Councilor John W. Daly and were favorably acted upon there. For sanitary improvements $7500 was stipulated and for paving, $9000.

The mayor vetoed both orders on the ground that neither is of an emergency nature and therefore, money for such improvements cannot properly be taken from prior revenue, or accumulated surplus account.

If the work called for in both orders should be done under a loan within the debt limit, the mayor would be inclined to look with favor upon them. The mayor feels that sanitary improvements in public schools are in the nature of permanent improvements and may be done under a loan and the same applies to block paving, he declares.

Following is the letter to the council accompanying the mayor's veto of the $7500 order for sanitary improvements:

May 26, 1923.
To the Members of the City Council: Gentlemen: Herewith is returned without my approval an order to appropriate the sum of $7500 from prior revenue account for the purpose of sanitary improvements in the Moody and Seymour street schools. I am opposed to the withdrawal of any money from prior revenue account for such a purpose, as I do not believe it to be the proper manner to finance the improvements in those schools as contemplated by the order.

Previously I have advised the city council that I would approve an order for such purpose, if the money needed to do the work was provided by loan within the debt limit. I consider the sanitary improvement called for of such a permanent nature as to justify a loan order for the work intended.

Signed JOHN J. DONOVAN, Mayor.

The letter in explanation of the veto of the paving order says:

May 26, 1923.
To the Members of the City Council: Gentlemen: Herewith is returned without my approval an order appropriating the sum of $7500 from prior revenue account for the purpose of block paving upper Lawrence street.

Upon reflection, it undoubtedly will be apparent to the members of the city council that such an order is quite an unusual and irregular procedure to obtain an appropriation for such a purpose.

The paving of upper Lawrence street is not an emergency of a public nature to justify an appropriation from prior revenue account, which account would perhaps be more clearly understood if designated as an accumulated surplus account.

Prior revenue account May 1 amounted to $75,933.41. Not a very large amount, should this city be visited with some unforeseen emergency, requiring immediate cash to protect the health or safety of our citizens. Surely, it cannot be urged that the paving of upper Lawrence street may be classified as an emergency within such interpretation.

Latter Seriously Damaged—Some of Freighter's Crew Had Remarkable Escapes

GLASGOW, May 26.—(By the Associated Press).—The steamship Metagama, bound from Glasgow for Montreal, with 1100 passengers, was in collision today with the British freighter Baron Vernon. FRUIT DEALER FELL FOR FLIM-FLAM GAME

At certain intervals, it seems flim-flam workers invade Lowell and victimize unsuspecting individuals with their cleverly concocted schemes. TEXTILE WORKERS WILL HOLD FIELD DAY

A meeting of the committee in charge of the first annual field day of the United Textile Workers of America, which will be held at Fall River on Saturday, June 2, will be held at the Hotel Melton in Fall River, Friday evening, June 1, and Lowell will be represented at the meeting by John Hanley, president of the Lowell Textile council.

It is expected that thousands of mill operatives from all over New England will attend the field day, which will be one big event. There will be outdoor sports galore, as well as addresses by prominent labor men. It is expected that Gov. Cox and other state and city officials will be in attendance and Mr. Hanley predicts that the event will be the greatest of its kind ever conducted by the labor movement in New England.

On Sunday afternoon, June 10, the New England conference board of the United Textile Workers of America, will hold its monthly meeting in Fall River. Hereafter the meetings have been held in Boston, but owing to the fact that most of the delegates will attend the field day in Fall River on the previous day, it has been deemed advisable to hold the meeting here.

McKENNA IN NEW CABINET

Outstanding Incident in New British Premier's Cabinet Making

McKenna, Noted Financier—
Sat in House of Commons for 23 Years as Liberal

LONDON, May 26. (By the Associated Press.)—Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin's capture of Reginald McKenna as the prospective chancellor of the exchequer, is viewed by today's newspapers as the outstanding incident in the new premier's cabinet making.

There are signs that the die-hard conservatives have their misgivings about the direction in which Mr. Baldwin is leading his party when he announces his intention of admitting to the cabinet a politician who sat in the house of commons for 23 years as a liberal and who never definitely recanted liberalism, although he supported the conservatives when the coalition fell.

The moderate conservatives, however, are heartily pleased at the prospect of the addition of a man regarded as one of the greatest living British financiers; and Mr. McKenna's willingness to serve in the conservative administration is hailed by the banking and commercial world as a most significant sign in the trend of political opinion.

Liberal newspapers frankly regret the defection of Mr. McKenna, but seek comfort in belittling the conservative ministers by saying that Mr. McKenna will be something like a triton among minnows.

THE POSTOFFICE IN CENTRALVILLE

Postmaster Navier A. Ueland has received from the department at Washington and transmitted to H. C. Goodwin the official acceptance of the latter's proposal for the new Centralville station.

In a separate communication received from Washington, the postmaster is instructed to move into the new quarters as soon as they are ready for occupancy.

In speaking of this order, the postmaster said that "in view of the necessary alterations and the fact that the lesser must provide all furniture and fixtures, it is my opinion that some weeks will elapse before the station can be opened."

Plans for the new station call for the selling of stamps, registering of mail, and the sale of domestic and international money orders there, and if the demand comes for postal savings, this feature will be incorporated into the station. Every class of mail will be received there for mailing, and all Centralville carriers will be assigned to the station under the supervision of a superintendent, who will be named later. Postoffice boxes will be available for rent to those who care to receive their mail in that way.

Practically all the carriers now on Centralville routes are anxious to stay there, but if any of them should desire to return to the old postoffice and be assigned new routes, the postmaster will be willing to take the matter up with them.

court this morning. Peloguin was found guilty and sentenced to three months to the house of correction.

Peloguin's trial was unique in several respects. In the first place, he conducted his own case in a thorough and clever manner, his interrogations being concise and right to the point. Another feature was the introduction of the agent through whose instrumentality the defendant was brought to justice.

This man, who gave his name as Charles Souler, was the first witness for the government and said he is a friend of Peloguin's and that he has known him for seven years.

On April 29, he said, he went to his house at 55 Worthen street with a marked bill given him by Officers Aldrich and Killey, and purchased a pint of liquor. He said he gave the marked bill to Peloguin, who in turn handed it over to a fellow named "Thomas" Walsh, the latter leaving his presence and returning with the bottle of spirits. Walsh denied that he ever saw Souler until he entered the house with the officers a short time after the alleged sale. Souler admitted that he had been drinking before the incident.

Officer Aldrich produced records to show that he had numerous exhibitions of traffic at the place mentioned and that he went there on one occasion and found a number of empty bottles. He cautioned Peloguin at that time, he said, to stop selling and was "given the launch" by the tenant in the house, who said he would "fool him just as he did Winn and his wise crowd."

"He who laughs last laughs best," thought Officer Aldrich when a finding of guilty was returned.

Maybe the offense was made because every night while we are going to bed they are getting up.

Rules in Favor of Dittmore

members had failed to submit to him charges upon which they based his removal. He adhered to the opinion that he had previously expressed in his report as master in the prolonged litigation between the church directors and the trustees of the Christian Science Publishing society that the First Church of Christ, Scientist was not incorporated within the meaning of the Massachusetts statutes.

"Personal Hostility"
"An element of personal hostility and dislike," the report said, "entertained toward the plaintiff by other members of the board, must be regarded as having entered into their action in preparing and adopting the resolution for his dismissal."

The defendants are Adam H. Dickey, Edward A. Merrill, William M. Hathorn, James A. Neal and Annie M. Knott. Dittmore was removed by vote of Dickey, Merrill and Hathorn at a meeting of the board on March 17, 1919, at which Neal was not present. At the same meeting, Mrs. Knott was elected to succeed Dittmore.

Charges Against Dittmore
The resolution embodying the dismissal of Dittmore charged that he had violated the church by laws by refusing to be bound by the majority votes of the board, had carried on a campaign for personal influence and control in the affairs of the mother church, had so conducted himself as to produce discord between the board and the publishing society trustees, had written letters to the board containing untrue statements and had acted at meetings of the board in a rude, offensive and threatening manner.

The master's report cited the deed of trust by which Mrs. Mary Baker Eddy, founder of the church in 1892, conveyed to four trustees, afterwards called directors, the land upon which the present church edifice later was erected. Nowhere in the deed, it said, was there any provision that the trustees were to be officers of any church and at no time had the directors been elected by vote of the church members or clothed with the powers which the statute gives to church officers and wardens of incorporated churches.

"I am unable," the report continued, "to regard the board's functions and powers, whether as defined in the deed of 1892, or as subsequently increased by the various by-laws later adopted from time to time as sufficiently similar to those usually belonging to the church officers mentioned in the statute as to bring the board within its provisions."

Method of Removal

With regard to the method of removal of Dittmore, the report said: "The only opportunity offered the plaintiff, after he had heard the charges against him read, was an opportunity to resign. It does not seem to me, in view of these facts, that he can reasonably be held to have lost all right to object by his failure to ask delay and further inquiry before the vote."

The report detailed numerous instances of differences between Dittmore and other members of the board and said that Dickey, Merrill and Neal had long contemplated Dittmore's dismissal but without disclosing to him that they were preparing for such action.

The report says that the master's conclusion must be that the plaintiff's repeated insistence upon a standard of propriety in language or conduct stricter than that accepted by his associates materially antagonized hostility and dislike which he provoked and strenuous opposition to their wishes upon so many matters cannot fail to have provoked in their minds toward him, I am obliged to regard them as culpable, on March 17, 1919, of improper judicial consideration of accusations against him, especially of accusations framed by themselves, but they ever undertaken such considerations.

Defendants File Objections
Objections by the defendants to the master's report were filed with it. They asserted that the master had adopted "improper procedure, prejudicial to the defendants" that he had written a document in the nature of an opinion instead of merely a finding of the facts, had made many unnecessary and erroneous rulings of law, and had reported unwarranted conclusions from undeposited documentary evidence contained in the report.

Without any opposition on the floor prior to a vote, the city council last night voted to override the mayor's veto on the order appropriating $10,000 for additional police protection by a vote of 10 to 5. Councilors Chadwick, Christian, Cosgrove, Dally, Fitzgerald, Lambert, McFadden, McFadden, Morley and Sadlier voted to override the veto, with Councilors Canamora, Gallagher, Genest, Hennessey and Stearns siding with the mayor.

This order was originally introduced by Councilor Frederick A. Sadlier and went through the council with but little opposition. Following the mayor's veto of it, however, action on overriding the veto has been put off from time to time and it became a most important measure.

Councilor Sadlier introduced a motion last night that the matter be taken from the table, and this was immediately seconded. The mayor, in vetoing the order, stated that it was contrary to his policy to approve supplemental appropriations, and further stated he believed the police department had sufficient money for the year. It was to this latter section that several of the council raised their objections.

Mr. Sadlier, in favoring the passing of the order, said it was not his idea to intimidate the mayor, and that he felt the mayor was trying to do good things for the city, but he objected to his saying that the police department could exist on its present appropriation.

Councilor Maurice J. Lambert, Jr. also spoke in favor of the order and explained that the reason for the passing of the police department for the first quarter of 1923 was because there was not the drain during this period as came later when affairs on the common, parades, etc., called for extra police. "If a big burglary or murder should be committed," he said, "in one of those unprotected districts there would be loud protests and cries for more police, and a strich in time saves nine and am going to vote for the passage of the order."

Councilor Daniel Cosgrove, in favoring the bill's passage, spoke of several recent occurrences in his district and traffic conditions all over the city and said, "It appears to me that economy would be parsimony when human lives are concerned and for that reason I must vote to pass the order over the mayor's veto."

Another matter which met with favorable action was Councilor Lambert's request that the board of public service confer with street railway officials relative to delaying any of switching

COUNCIL OVERRIDES MAYOR'S VETO AND PASSES $10,000 ORDER FOR MORE PATROLMEN

Without any opposition on the floor prior to a vote, the city council last night voted to override the mayor's veto on the order appropriating $10,000 for additional police protection by a vote of 10 to 5. Another matter which met with favorable action was Councilor Lambert's request that the board of public service confer with street railway officials relative to delaying any of switching cars from right to left tracks before swinging onto Dutton street from Merrimack. Mr. Lambert termed traffic conditions at this corner especially dangerous and said the cross-over there should be eliminated. Pres. Gallagher also spoke in favor of this order and it was unanimously accepted.

Mr. Lambert also introduced an order requesting that board of public service confer with officials of the Lowell shops relative to the laying of a temporary sidewalk where excavations are being made for the new building in Dutton street. This was also approved. Councilor Eugene A. Fitzgerald introduced an order requesting the Lowell Electric Light Co. to remove a pole located near where the Broadway club's memorial monument is to be placed. The time limit for the pole's removal was set at one week and the order was accepted.

Arthur R. Chadwick, councilor from Ward 4, questioned whether or not public garage petitions should go before the planning board for action, and then introduced an order to have the board of public service confer with the Shaw Stocking Co. on the matter of a high fence at the corner of Shaw and Smith streets, which creates a blind corner.

Mr. Chadwick's question relative to the planning board's latest in public garage permits was caused by the erection of a garage at this particular corner which is making conditions much worse. President Gallagher said that he believed the planning board was supposed to take care of such permits and the matter was closed.

Petitions for street and sidewalk repairs were referred to the board of public service. Several petitions for pole locations were received and a hearing set for June 6.

A protest against a pole located at Hadley and Princeton streets was received and Councilor Chadwick was named to take the matter up with the telephone company.

Orders transferring $1526 from the general treasury fund to the school appropriation for replacing furnishings in the Mann school damaged by fire, $10,151 from the general treasury to the buildings department for damage by fire to the same school were approved. These sums have been received from the insurance companies and the transfers were a mere matter of form.

An invitation from the U. A. R. to the mayor and council requesting them to take part in the Memorial day parade and to review the parade was accepted. The meeting adjourned at 8:40, after being in session 13 minutes.

In the game, the fruit man could be of assistance only by depositing a sum of money with the agent. He "fell" for the trick and deposited $600 in a cleverly constructed case. The man then left the store, saying he would return later in the day to arrange final settlement. As the matter turned out, he hasn't returned yet and when the victim of the affair opened the case left in his possession, he found but 4 one dollar bills.

Number one man is described as being about 30 years of age, five foot six inches in height; weight, 170 pounds, dark complexion, wore blue suit, soft brown hat and light spring overcoat. Number two is perhaps 28 years old, five foot, nine inches in height and weighs about 140 pounds. He is of medium complexion and wore a spring overcoat over a blue suit.

The man then left the store, saying he would return later in the day to arrange final settlement. As the matter turned out, he hasn't returned yet and when the victim of the affair opened the case left in his possession, he found but 4 one dollar bills.

Number one man is described as being about 30 years of age, five foot six inches in height; weight, 170 pounds, dark complexion, wore blue suit, soft brown hat and light spring overcoat. Number two is perhaps 28 years old, five foot, nine inches in height and weighs about 140 pounds. He is of medium complexion and wore a spring overcoat over a blue suit.

Here the third member of the party said he had been designated by a former Lowell business man, who was dying in California, to settle his financial difficulties, and that the fruit man's name had been given to him as reference. He said the dying man was formerly in business in this city and ran away with thousands of dollars to belong to a partner. He confessed on his death bed that $25,000 money should be returned to Lowell people and asked the stranger to see to it that this was accomplished.

That was the reason for his inquiring and finding the innocent fruit dealer who was to receive about $3000 for his trouble. But there was a catch

"LIGHTNIN" NEXT WEEK AT THE OPERA HOUSE

The long heralded production "Lightnin," the famous comedy hit which has created such a furor in New York, Chicago and Boston, will be presented at the Opera House, this city, direct from Boston, next Monday and Tuesday evenings, May 28 and 29. This is important to Lowell theatergoers, as this was one of the first cities to be chosen for a presentation of "Lightnin," after its sensational run at the Hollis theatre, Boston.

In the five years since this play was first produced at the Gaiety theatre, New York, it has broken every long run record not only in that city but also in Chicago, and during the past seven months at the Hollis theatre has outlived every other play that had ever appeared at that famous playhouse. The cast that John Golden will send here is headed by Percy Pollock as Lightning Bill Jones, and includes the same well known players who have been continuously identified with this sensational hit during its three years in New York and two years in Chicago, and includes Jack Baker, Jason H. Hards, Paul Stanton, Thomas MacFadden, Jesse Brinkley, Percy Winter, Sam Reed, Grace Perkins, George Thompson, May Purvis, E. J. Blunk, and James C. Lane.

No comedy that has ever been produced in America has achieved the success of this famous classic of tears and laughter. It has broken records everywhere, for it is a play of the people and by the people. The characters in it are those that you see in everyday life. Lightning Bill Jones, as played by Percy Pollock, is a common figure in the world. An old Civil war veteran, a braggart who finds pleasure in telling lies, but who would fight if you called him a liar, a man of an unimpeachable thirst, lazy and just good enough to do odd jobs around the house, but one that has a heart warm and true, one that is always on the lookout to do another human being a good turn.

"Lightnin" is the work of Winchell Smith and Frank Bacon and has its scenes laid in a little hotel situated on the border line of California and Nevada. While the play is a happy blend of laughter and tears, its tremendous drawing power centered around Lightning Bill Jones. Very quaint and novel, he can talk fluently on any subject, and has done anything that you might happen to suggest. To tell you the story of the play would only spoil a couple of hundred of the thousands of laughs that are packed into the play. Disregard rumors that the house has been sold out. There are some very fine seats left for the performance on both days and those who go in the box office immediately can secure very fine seats for this play. Take advantage of the opportunity of seeing this wonderful play, as it will not be shown in this city again.

AMUSEMENT NOTES

THE STRAND
"Omar, the Tentmaker," Will Head an Excellent Program First Three Days of the Week

The offering by The Strand management for the first three days of the coming week, starting with matinee on Monday, will be headed by the big First National production, "Omar, the Tentmaker," with Guy Bates Post in the starring role. Frank Mayo will be the "Planning Hour" with the second feature, and the other contributions will include a good comedy, an excellent weekly issue, and a fun from "The Flaming Hour" for the last three days of the week, starting with the Thursday matinee. Charles Ray in "Smudge" and Charles (Rock) Jones in "The Footlight Ranger" will be featured. There is a special Sunday program arranged, with five all-star vaudeville acts and an entire change of pictures.

"Omar, the Tentmaker," has been hailed as the screen's most colorful offering. Guy Bates Post is at his best, and Richard Walton Tully, the producer, has given it his best efforts. The dramatic life of Persian legend is depicted in vivid manner in this offering. A thread of the interesting story leads into the harem of the Shah of Persia, where dozens of beautiful girls are held prisoners until such time as they lose their beauty and fall from grace. Of old the Persian shahs were the most despotic and powerful of all rulers, and they were able to order the death of any maiden they desired for their harem. In "Omar the Tentmaker," Shireen, the beloved of Omar Kouryam, is "drafted" in such a manner, but the chief plot revolves around the love of Omar and Shireen, who escape and go through various adventures before she is reunited with her lover. Virginia Brown Faire plays the role opposite the star, Guy Bates Post. Tully's extreme youth, who was selected for the difficult role, and the selection proved the wisdom of the producer. The extraordinary dramatic talent and personal charm of the young woman, as well as the peculiar type she portrays, is reflected by her in her interpretation of the young woman lover. The other members of the cast that assist are all capable and pleasing.

For those wives and husbands who fancy that occasional displays of temper and bad nature mean the end of marital happiness, there is a lesson to be learned in "Omar the Tentmaker." Written by Lillian Chester, and her husband, Alvin, Randolph Chester helped in rounding into form and finished. We must not tell you what the story is, except to suggest that people who are forever looking on the dark side of life, as a result of a few trifling incidents that develop in their way, should see it and benefit.

Charles Ray is a newspaper editor and owner in his latest picture offering, "Smudge." It will appear Thursday, Friday, and Saturday at the Strand theatre, and if you are partial to Charlie and his creations of the film, you must not miss this treat. He plays the part of Stephen Stanton, who inherits a small newspaper in a small town and believes at the start that the place will never provide sufficient news to fill the small columns of his paper. He discovers, however, that his sometimes develop in small communities, and when he starts to investigate he runs into a fund of adventure. The story is a perfect blend of humor and drama, and comes from the most successful writer, the famous Saturday Evening Post writer.

Charles (Rock) Jones in "The Footlight Ranger" will give variety to the week-end bill. The picture is an all-out of the plugging elements found in high-class picture entertainment with done at his best. The remainder of the offering will include a good comedy, a weekly and some excellent musical numbers. Then there is "The Strand" comfort. It's always cool, comfortable and genuinely enjoyable at The Strand.

SUNDAY AT THE STRAND
"The Son of the Desert," a photoplay of rare value and entertaining power will be shown for the first time locally at the Strand on Sunday. This special creation of the screen has won unquestioned praise in all of the theatrical centres and will unquestionably win favor with local patrons. Besides this offering there will be the usual five acts of vaudeville. This feature, together with Strand comfort will make the bill one of the best of the season. Come early and avoid the crush.

RIALTO THEATRE
"Over the Hill" Will be the Attraction of the Rialto Monday and Tuesday—Wonderful Production.

The wonderful screen production of the new, "Over the Hill," is coming to the Rialto theatre on Monday and Tuesday of next week and those who missed a chance of seeing Mary Carr's wonderful acting in the picture, was shown in Lowell before, will now have an opportunity of doing so.

The picture is without doubt one of the most appealing ever produced on the screen. It is a story which strikes home to the heart of every man, woman and child who sees it, for it forces home a point on which we are all bound to be a little careless. Nearly everybody remembers the famous song of the same name and all will be delighted how to see it depicted on the screen with a sure and once both appealing and sad. Mary Carr rises to the height of her reputation in the production and that is not saying too much.

For Wednesday and Thursday the Rialto has a stirring production entitled "Challenge of Chance," a love madness is another of the picture in the same program and there is a comedy and the Rialto News to furnish fun and interest.

MERRIMACK SQUARE THEATRE

Thomas Meighan in "The Neer-Do-Well," Adapted From Rex Beach's Novel, and Buster Keaton Features

Powerful, dramatic and absorbing, Thomas Meighan's new Paramount picture, "The Neer-Do-Well," a picture of a picture of Rex Beach's celebrated novel, will open a four days' engagement at the Merrimack Square theatre tomorrow. This is in an attraction of extraordinary importance to all admirers of the noted star. Not only is the photoplay a cinema triumph, but it presents Meighan in one of the strongest roles in which that star has been seen since his tremendous success in "The Miracle Man." It is a picture production that every screen fan in the country will enjoy.

Kirk Anthony, played by Thomas Meighan, is the neer-do-well son of a wealthy man. As the result of a prank he finds himself on board a steamship bound for Panama without a cent in his pockets. He arrives, and the fun begins.

Lila Lee plays Mrs. Corlandt, a woman of means, who obtains for him a position on the railroad as a conductor. While this employed he encounters and falls in love with a charming Spanish girl. Their love romance is prolific of many interesting developments, which combine to make "The Neer-Do-Well" one of the most entertaining picture shows here this season.

Lila Lee plays opposite Mr. Meighan with signal effect. The cast generally, including Gertrude Astor, John Milner, Gus Weinberg and Laurence Wheat, acquitted themselves artistically.

Other attractions for the first part of the week will include Buster Keaton in "Day Dreams," his latest comedy in three reels. Every photoplay fan knows the ability of Keaton to pack more laughs into a single foot of film than the ordinary comedian can get in half a reel. "Day Dreams" is no exception to the general rule. There will be the usual excellent surrounding program.

NERVOUS HEADACHE AND DIZZY SPELLS

Malnutrition of the Nerves Was Corrected in This Case by Tonic Treatment

Some forms of nervous headache cannot be entirely overcome but there are few cases in which they cannot be relieved and made more infrequent. When headache and dizziness are accompanied by symptoms of general debility it is always advisable to take tonic treatment. As the general health improves it is often found that the nervous symptoms disappear.

This was the case with Mrs. Albert Bartol of No. 3976 Washington street, Roslindale, Mass. She had been a nervous sufferer since girlhood but some time ago her suffering became more acute. She says:

"I suffered from blinding headaches when everything would get black and spin around. I became so dizzy that I had to take hold of something to keep me from falling. This condition lasted for a couple of hours. I was always tired and did not have any ambition. I had a great craving for food but could not enjoy eating. There was a pain across my back and I felt generally run down."

"My mother had used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and she urged me to try them. Within a short time after I began to take the pills there was a decided improvement in my condition. My strength returned, slowly at first, but now I feel like a different person. I eat heartily and my food gives me strength. My nerves are stronger and the headaches are much less severe and they very seldom appear now. After what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have done for me I do not hesitate to recommend them to everyone in need of a tonic."

"Make America Musical" Will Be Slogan of First Music Convention

MRS. JOHN F. LYONS

By N.E.A. Service
ASHEVILLE, N. C., May 25.—Every home a music center!

THE PLAIN GOLD BAND IS VANISHING SYMBOL

BY DOLLY DEARBORN
CHICAGO, May 25.—The plain gold band is a vanishing symbol. Of all the wedding rings that are sold at Easter-time and June-time and all the scattering other times through the year, jewelers tell me that only 3 per cent. are plain gold bands any more.

Here's a Dainty Dish!

Says Red Man Should Be Protected From Own Generosity

By MARIAN HALE
NEW YORK, May 25.—"Protect the Indian from his generosity!" Miss Edith M. Dabb, head of the work of the national board of the Y.W.C.A. on the Indian reservations, and who has lived among Indians for over 20 years, says that the tendency of the red man to give away everything he owns during the process of certain tribal dances is one of the greatest bars to his advancement.

"The appeal went to all Indians by Charles H. Burke, commissioner of Indian affairs, from Washington, asks them to refrain from all dances and pow-wows that mean neglect of crops or live stock in their absence," she says, "and in this same appeal he points out the injustice to their families of the 'give away' feature prevalent at so many dances."

"This 'give away' feature has very serious consequences when it involves the wives and daughters of the participants. When it involves live stock, farming implements or teams, an Indian often returns home unable to farm or so seriously handicapped by his losses that his chances at a livelihood are gone."

"Among the Zunis and the Pueblos, dances are of two kinds—those of a ceremonial nature and those done in private. It is only those of the ceremonial dances, that result in orphans and all-night camps, and the commercialized dance, that tempts the Indian away from a livelihood for his family, that Commissioner Burke had in mind when sending his appeal."

Degenerating
"The white man's influence has had its part in making many of these gold and can be worked in finer designs, and the diamond-set, platinum circlet matches the engagement ring that still is a solitaire diamond and usually is set in platinum, sometimes in a four-prong and sometimes in the basket setting."

Platinum is increasingly popular for the setting for the diamond solitaire as it has a tendency to bring out more brilliantly the colors of the gem.

On the other hand the new custom of setting five little diamonds in the platinum circlet and adding one on each anniversary is as bad as the written record in the old family Bible.

The hand-chased gold ring which is only a little more expensive than the plain band is the most in demand. This usually carries a floral design with orange blossoms, the bride's own particular flower, predominating. The design hammered in by hand makes the metal more compact and gives a better wearing surface. This makes the ring more durable than the plain gold one which sometimes grows thin by the time the golden anniversary rolled around.

Both the hand-chased and the platinum rings have an enduring quality that will make it possible for them to be handed down to daughter and granddaughter and are perhaps a subtle suggestion of a more enduring quality in the life they symbolize.

Jewelers predict that in another two years the platinum ring will lead in popularity. It is a harder metal than dances degenerate. Boys and girls of the tribes who go back to the reservations from government and mission schools regard these dances as the greatest factor retarding the development of their people.

"Often these dances are planned so they will offer immediate and forceful temptations to these young people. Recently a number of returned students united to fight their influence."

Miss Dabb is among those who collaborated with H. E. Lindquist in the preparation of "The Red Man of the United States." Assisting her in her work are three college trained women of the Sac-and-Fox, Sioux and Cherokee tribes who work among girls of their own race.

PASTEL SHADES FOR LINGERIE

The summer edition of your lingerie can be as light as a summer breeze and as vari-colored as the rainbow.

Voile is the thing for summer lingerie. Pastel shades are very popular—rose, orchid, pale blue, even "Elephant's Breath gray," have established a new color scheme for underwear.

The style shown here combines chemise and pantaloons in a long-waisted effect to fit the long-waisted summer dresses. Checked batiste, voile, Marquise, georgette, crepe de chine and many other sheer materials may be used for it.

Just Keep Playing Make-Believe Advises Southern Prize Winner

(By NEA Service)
SAN ANTONIO, Tex., May 25.—When you were little you loved to play make-believe, didn't you? Keep it up if you want to stay young and beautiful, advises Edith Wing Peacock, psychologist and famous southern beauty. She believes that psychology reveals more avenues to beauty than any beauty shop.

"Here's what keeps me young," she said, pointing to a photograph of a beautiful girl in an old-fashioned frock.

"Myself—at 15," she explained. "I keep this always with me and it is the picture of myself that I keep in my mind. People are as old as they think. I think of 15, not 70.

"I constantly tell women to remember that every thought affects the curves of body building just as every thought of the mason directs the shape and stability of the house."

Mind Builds
"The mind is the architect and the cells are the builders. Since this is true, how necessary it is to keep the mind busy transmitting thoughts of love, health and youth."

Mrs. Peacock thinks autosuggestion keeps her looking like her young daughter instead of a mother.

"Walk as though you were young," she advises. "Don't allow yourself to slump. When you are too tired to sit up or stand up, then go to bed, not to be sick, but to relax. Take time every day to meditate on the beautiful."

"If you are too plump, roll and exercise. If you are thin, stop worrying and spend much time out of doors, but all the time keep before you the mental image of what you want to be instead of what you are afraid you may be."

Here's Recipe
This mental care must, of course, be supplemented by attention to physical needs.

Here's an old southern recipe she advocates for keeping the face smooth and unlined:

OUIDA BERGERE

BY MARIAN HALE
NEW YORK, May 25.—What type of woman makes the happiest wife?

According to Ouida Bergere, scenario writer, it is what she terms the "high-grade moron," who simply sells herself to her husband because it is easier than to hang on to her own individuality.

"Without understanding her husband's aims and ambitions, she fosters them by apparently listening attentively while he soliloquizes on his importance, his present and his future," she explains.

"She feeds him well and sees he is properly clothed. She realizes his mental superiority and exaggerates it, looking up to him with something akin to awe."

"Many times you hear people say, 'I wonder what that man saw in her,' when commenting on a man's wife. The fact is he never saw anything but his own reflected image—and he fell for it. Had she manifested any personality of her own he would have been afraid of her."

She Isn't Ideal
This type of wife is not, however, the ideal wife, Miss Bergere says.

"The ideal wife understands her husband's business and his temperament. She sympathizes with his ambitions and furthers them."

"But I do not believe husband and wife can work together harmoniously if they have the same purpose and ambition," she confesses.

"For four years I suffered intensely from jealousy of my own husband," Miss Bergere's husband is George

Beauty Tips and Advice As to Care of the Face by Mme. Helene Rubinstein

AT LAST A "SEEING PHONE"

The weakness of this "seeing phone" is that the user sees herself and not the party at other end of the line. It's the latest fad in San Francisco society. Miss Thana Speed is shown using a combination portable vanity case and telephone. Miss Speed says the new invention saves time, as one may now "make up" while making a date.

ORANGE-RHUBARB MARMALADE

By BERTHA E. SHAPLEIGH
Of Columbia University
Remove the skin from eight oranges and boil it in a small amount of water until tender. Then scrape out all the white part and cut the yellow part into very small pieces.
To the pulp of the oranges and five pounds of rhubarb which has been cut into inch pieces. Boil one-half hour. Add four pounds of sugar and boil slowly for two hours. Add the orange peel and turn the marmalade into glasses.
This is a very good marmalade and offers another way of using rhubarb while it is young and tender.

WHIPPED FOODS
It is sanitary to buy cakes, pies, crackers and other foods which are to be eaten immediately in wrapped packages or containers. However, they have to be cooked before eating and hence should be purchased in bulk as they are cheaper that way.

SAVING BUTTER
The butter cut in small blocks or made in shapes and served on the bread and butter plates is to be avoided. On the plate it is perfectly clean, even if left, because the knife is used only for that.

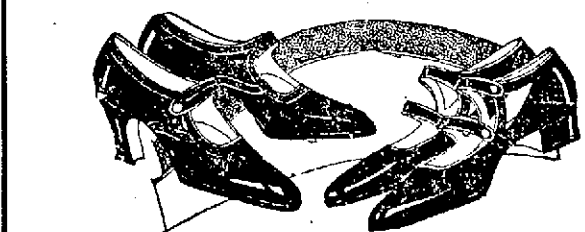

REMOVING INK
Fresh ink stains may be removed by soaking in milk. Old ink stains that have dried may be removed by washing in hot lard. Wash as one would with water, using again and again, finally washing out the lard in soapy water.

LINGERIE BLOUSES
Lingerie waists are very popular this season and are shown in beautiful styles. Collars of bottle bands fastened together in lace designs sometimes take the place of the conventional collar of lace or the one that is lace trimmed.

USEFUL ARTICLE
The pink crepe or satin underlip with the accordion pleated skirt is a useful addition to any wardrobe. When the summer is over it still has possibilities as a negligee foundation when combined with a jacket of lace or georgette.

CORDEUOY JACKETS
Jackets of white corduroy with brilliant and fantastic figures are a novelty to wear with the white silk or cotton skirt.

Beauty Expert Says You Can Protect Skin by Proper Use of Powder—Rubinstein Tells How To Do It

BY MME. HELENE RUBINSTEIN
International Beauty Expert
(Copyright, 1923 N.E.A. Service, Inc.)

Between the severe spring weather America has just endured and the brilliant summer sun which will soon be playing havoc with our skins, one may look for the usual crop of wrinkles, lines, shriveled and dried up skins.

One cannot control the weather, but at least one can protect the skin by the use of scientifically shielding powder base.

From the artistic point of view, no finishing touch can succeed without a foundation. The skin is full of pores which are like so many hungry mouths that swallow whatever is brought in direct contact with them.

Rouge and powder no matter how excellent their quality lose their effect by being drawn more and more deeply into the tissues instead of remaining on the surface. But, put something between the cosmetic and the skin and there is no reason why your powder should not last the whole afternoon and evening without your having to add the least mite.

Whenever you see a woman frequently powdering her nose or putting fresh rouge on her cheeks, you may be sure that either she hasn't used a foundation at all or that she has made a poor choice.

French women invariably use a foundation on their lips.

And now comes the question of the character of the foundation. If the skin is normal, your choice may be guided by preference so far as the question of whether it shall be a lotion or cream. But if the skin is dry be sure to use something containing soothing oils.

In the evening a vanishing cream is sometimes preferred to a base of any other kind, but for daytime I do not think it is as satisfactory as a balm.

When it happens to be windy or if the sun is shining brilliantly for better results are obtained by using a scientific protective, either in the form of a non-dissipating cream or a lotion.

There are some skins, however, that do not easily discolor and if these happen to be of the oily type a lovely foundation can be made with liquid powder.

Dry powder and rouge should be put on before the liquid dries. This forms a very thin film that is good to protect the pores and is also becoming as it corrects the tendency to shine.

Jane Crowl's beauty is a composite of soulful eyes, the most amazing creamy complexion, beautiful hair and the grace of a Greek goddess. Yet Miss Crowl never neglects any detail of personal care and always complements her beauty with perfect grooming. Her beauty should last forever.

THE "ODYSSEY" MAY BE GREEK TO SOME, BUT—

These are young American women interpreting Homer's epic, with scarfs and drapes and without shoes or stockings. This, by girls of Mt. Holyoke University, Mass.

THIEF
An empty garbage pail is the certain indication of two things: that one knows how to buy and how to use what one has bought. Thief does not put slices of bread, halves of stale loaves, bits of cheese, vegetables, bones and scraps of meat into the garbage pail.

ENAMELED FURNITURE
Enamelled furniture should be wiped off with a soft cloth, wringing out of lukewarm soapsuds—using a pure soap—and dried with another soft cloth.

THE EGGBEATER
Never let the eggbeater soak, as that draws the oil from the gears. It should be washed at once and set to dry.

RED GEORGETTE
Coral red georgette, combined with coral lace and gold fleure ribbon, makes a very charming negligee.

BAKED POTATOES
Baking potatoes uses up considerable gas. You can lessen the time by boiling the potatoes for 15 or 20 minutes and finishing them in a hot oven.

APRICOT TAFFETA
A hat of apricot taffeta has an all-over applique of black velvet cut out in a cherry and vine design.

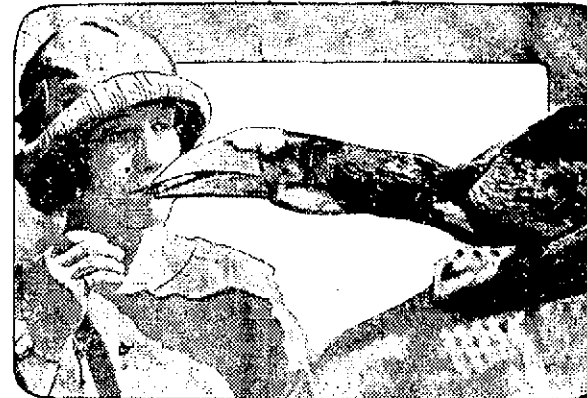

TAPESTRY BAGS
Tapestry is the only cloth in vogue for bags in Paris today. The bags generally match the costume in tone or background, however.

SHORTER SKIRTS
The shorter skirt length, it is said, will characterize all of the modes for fall.

BEADS AGAIN
The beaded frock is coming back to favor for evening wear. Frocks of white satin or crepe de chine beaded with crystal or pearl are liked.

LONG COATS
Long coats of silk and satin are extensively shown, lined with chiffon or crepe and collared with the lightest and softest of summer furs.

WHITE MILLINERY
Draped turbans of white tulle, satin, velvet or duvetyn are very smart for wear with all white costume, or the white fur coat.

LIKE PLAYING WITH DYNAMITE

This hornbill has strength enough in its beak to pierce a human skull, but here he is gently plucking a grape from the lips of a fair visitor to the London zoo.

STYLES IN PEARLS

It is the fad now to wear two strings of pearl beads, one that fits closely about the throat and another which may reach to the waistline. Usually the small string has the larger beads.

MID-SUMMER STYLES

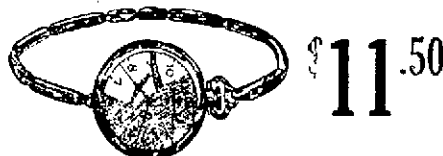

Summer frocks in organdie and taffeta show pleatings, trimmings and panels to accentuate the straight line. Bouffant organdie frocks are worn near straight-line slips of satin or silk cloth.

One of the startling and beautiful designs of the season was brought out by a French house a short time ago. It shows black velvet applied to white organdie.

STEAM LEFT-OVER MEATS

If you steam the left-over chops or steak they will be almost as good as when first cooked and will not be as dry as when they are baked or broiled.

KEEP LID ON

Your dumplings or steamed puddings are quite apt to fall if you lift the lid of the steamer while they are cooking.

ONE COMBINATION THAT STAYS

Black and white is one of the color combinations that is never out of favor in Paris and here is one of its newest incarnations.

Black crepe is used for the full long skirt and short sleeved bolero jacket. White crepe makes a basque bodice, long waisted, of course, that has long tight sleeves flaring out over the wrist nearly to the base of the fingers. White crepe, too, makes an underpanel for the front of the skirt.

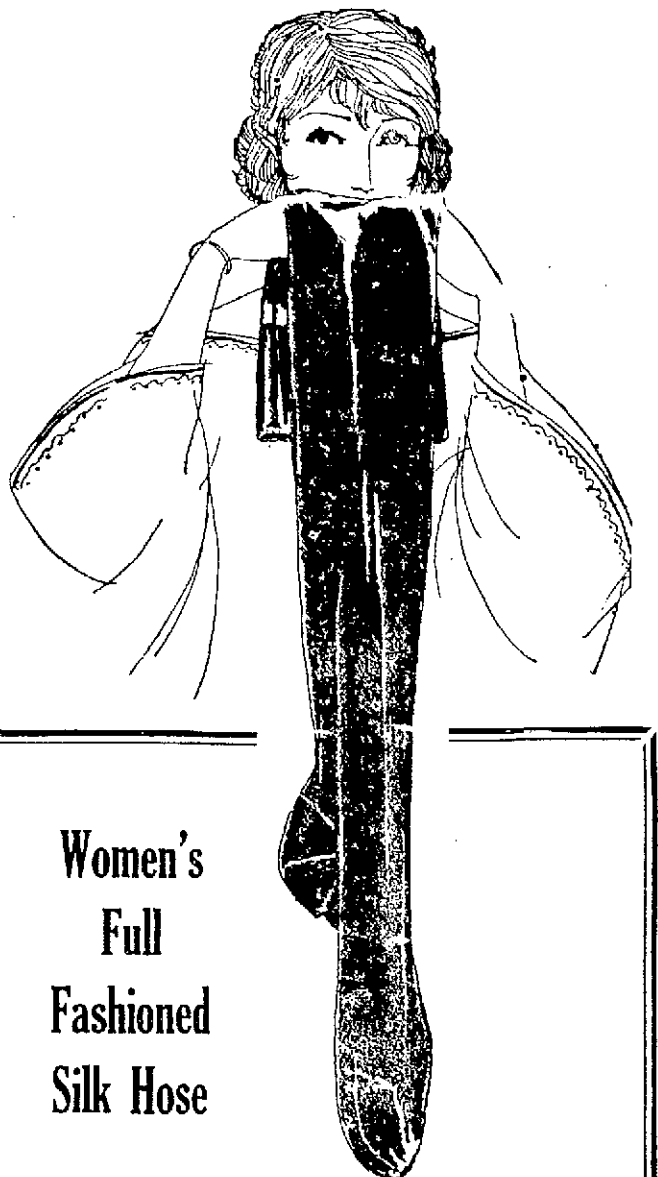

Similar costumes, use organdie in brown and white or linen of two shades in an equally successful effect.

COMBINATION CONSERVE

Rhubarb and strawberries cooked together make an excellent conserve. When strawberries are not first-class they may be made delicious in this way.

THE WORLD COURT

Senator Borah is the chief opponent of the proposition that the United States shall join the international court. In a debate on the merits of the question before the Women's Republican club of Massachusetts on Thursday, in Boston, the senator stated his objections to the court. He said it is not a court of justice but merely an arbitration tribunal. Even so, if it settles by arbitration the issues on which nations split and go to war it will serve a most useful purpose. The senator objects to it because it has not the power to command its members, viz., it has not power enough. He opposed the League of Nations because of having too much power. If an international body is organized for any purpose whatsoever, its powers and prerogatives must be clearly laid down, and we believe the functions of this world court are well understood. Senator Borah would have a world court with power over all the nations to be exercised as our supreme court uses its power of deciding issues for all the states with unquestioned finality. It would require an international army to enforce the decisions of such a court, but as that is not available, the world court deals only with cases submitted to it by the parties to the controversy. Already fourteen nations have accepted the court as compulsory, while the others regard it as voluntary, so that in the international aspect, it takes on the status of our supreme court as regards the various states, so far as the nations are individually willing to have it so. As for the United States, the senate would decide what issues affecting this nation would be submitted to the arbitration or adjudication of the world court.

Congressman Burton who voices President Harding's view of the court, claims that its compulsory powers will be enlarged as soon as its efficacy in preventing war becomes apparent to the world. Thus eventually it would come to meet the ideal of Senator Borah in exercising compulsory powers over the nations for the prevention of war. As for the United States, while we pretend to be opposed to wars and in favor of peace among the nations, unless we co-operate with other nations in their efforts to maintain universal peace, the sincerity of our declaration in this respect will be doubted.

There is one menace that may eventually unite all civilized nations for their common defense and the prevention of a world war that would wipe out the last remnants of civilization in Europe. That menace comes from Russia with the red hand of the Communists and the dangerous propaganda that is being rapidly spread all over the world. If the world court serves to fortify the nations by union for their own safety, then it will serve a good purpose. It will require the united action of all the nations of Europe to hold the Soviets in Russia and if the court will assist in that desirable end, as it certainly must, then it is an institution that should be favored, fostered and protected. In such a work—peace and the restraint of communism, this court, if conducted on the principles outlined, may prove to be the foremost safeguard of civilization and the most effective preventive of war. Whether it will become such will depend upon the use made of it by the nations and particularly upon whether the United States will be one of its supporting nations.

STOP FATAL CARELESSNESS

For a city of our size we are piling up a very alarming list of fatalities as a result of automobile accidents. Already we have had five deaths from such accidents in this city since the first of the year. Several of these have been children who ran in front of the automobiles in such a way that it was impossible to avoid running over them or knocking them down. It seems that parents are sadly negligent in teaching their children not to go off the sidewalk on any street where automobiles are frequently passing. If the curbstone is made the dead line, except at a regular crossing, then most of these fatalities would be averted. But children without any dread or warning are allowed to go out on the street and they thoughtlessly cross the street or run out into the path of automobiles while playing ball or rolling a hoop and the inevitable result follows. The driver, in such cases, is arrested and charged with manslaughter, but this is a mere legal formality that as a rule results only in the acquittal of the accused driver.

Various safety-first campaigns have been conducted here but it seems they are followed by a crop of accidents that would indicate increased carelessness instead of greater caution. This matter is very serious, for the reason that it will mean the killing of a dozen or more persons in the course of the year. The public seems to have become so much accustomed to accidents of this kind that a fatality simply causes a momentary expression of surprise and then is forgotten. Even where one child is killed today on one of the public thoroughfares, other children will be playing tomorrow. Who is to blame for this state of affairs? If not the parents, who fail to chastise their children for running in the danger? It would seem that the police might also be instructed to prevent children from crossing the streets at dangerous places and from playing in the pathway of fast moving motor vehicles. A great many people do not seem to realize the chance that has taken place in recent years in our public streets. Some boys might safely play games some years ago they now incur the risk of instant death if they venture upon one of these public highways. There is evidently a remedy to be found some where and it is up to the police department to enforce regulations that should be and there is a good reason to believe that it will come down from getting in the way of motor traffic.

In the city of New York in the month of April 25 persons were killed while playing on the streets and crossings. In the same month 779 were injured while crossing at the middle of a block and 149 crossing at street intersections. That nearly 1,000 persons were killed and injured in New York city in one month indicates a waste of economic man power and a constantly growing source of sorrow and bereavement to thousands of families. The old warning to "stop, look and listen" seems to be forgotten. If all these injuries and fatalities occurred at the same time, the people would stand aghast in horror and call for a legal remedy to prevent its repetition; but the lives are snatched away one by one with alarming regularity; and so long as the people are not killed by the dozen or the score, it seems to be nobody's business and it passes as a matter of course.

Something must be done in New York and something must also be done in Lowell. We suggest that Mayor

Donovan take this matter up in view to having the police adopt vigorous methods against children playing in the streets and crossing the streets except at regular crossings. By adopting strict regulations and having them enforced, he can greatly reduce the number of fatalities and thus save many precious lives.

WHY COAL IS HIGH

An official of the International Union of United Mine Workers of America in an address before the Yonkers board of trade said that there are 4000 low and 200,000 too many miners, and he charges that the coal operators are responsible for this condition.

It is doubtless a fact that the excessive number of mines adds to the cost of production for the reason that the cost of maintaining 4000 needless mines must be paid out of the receipts for the amount of coal produced and sold, and from this also must be provided a living for the 200,000 surplus miners employed in the industry. It would seem that some direction agency is necessary to solve the mining difficulties and to restore competition, where at present the fault does not lie with the United Mine Workers nor with the men employed in mining coal. They are justified in accepting employment wherever they can find it and as a result of the excessive number of mines, the miners do not get ready work and they complain also that their wages are not sufficient to support them in the ordinary course of life. It would seem that if competition were freely allowed, the mines would be eliminated, the unnecessary ones for the reason that no coal operator would maintain a mine that is not doing a profitable business. The situation is evidently dictated by the coal operators and the railroads with which they are allied.

The government should regulate the production and sale of coal as it regulates the production of steel and other commodities. A great many people who play in the pathway of fast moving motor vehicles, the public should be protected against the predators and speculators, whether they are among the coal operators or the stock gamblers who buy out large quantities of coal and hold it to produce an artificial shortage.

At present coal is far higher than it should be and there is a good reason to believe that it will come down from getting in the way of motor traffic.

BETTER RAILROAD SERVICE

Railroad mergers and consolidations of various kinds have been discussed at great length before the Interstate Commerce commission and the public has been so persistent that it is quite probable that something in the line will be done. President Hiram of the Boston & Maine states that his road is not bankrupt nor broken down. He holds it is giving good service, but it lacks the funds for expansion. It is probable that the New England roads will be united in a regional system and that this will be joined with some transcontinental line. President Hiram of the Boston & Maine would like to unite with the Canadian Pacific, but the U. S. C. has no jurisdiction to delete the terms of a merger with that system.

It is time to make some change in the New England roads that will put new life into them and enable them to give improved service at reasonable rates.

The handicap of differentials may be overcome in making the proposed changes, as New England should not be continuously held in this bondage to the south. Now England must assert itself; and it cannot do so successfully until the proposed mergers become effective.

DIPHTHERIA DISAPPEARING

The diphtheria death rate has been cut in half in the last three years by using the Schick Test, announces Dr. Hermann M. Briggs, the New York commissioner of health.

So another dread disease is getting under control, its virtual elimination only a matter of time and sense. One after the other, science conquers the germ maladies. Yellow fever is as good as gone. Smallpox is becoming rare.

Pasture, father of modern bacteriology, declared it "within the power of man to cause the parasitic diseases to disappear from the surface of the earth." People laughed at him—then. Now it begins to look as if he were right.

MAGELLAN'S HELMET

H. D. Seltzer, army major, displays among his curios the brass helmet worn by Magellan, Portuguese navigator whose expedition was first to sail around the world. It is a heavy affair, richly carved, but most of us would as soon wear an iron beam pot. Magellan died 402 years ago, but his work in navigation opened new paths to commerce and gave new encouragement to the mariners of the world. Like Columbus, he sailed under the patronage of the Spanish sovereign, having failed to interest Portugal in the undertaking. The voyage took about two years, although today it can be made in a little over a month.

LONGER LIFE

The average American now lives 55 years, or 15 years more than when the Civil war started, and by 1950 the span of life may be raised to 60 years. So predicts Dr. Haven Emerson of New York City.

The joker in the modern prolongation of average life, however, is that the gain has been largely by reducing the death rate among children. People who pass maturity still die at about the same age as in the past.

When we strike an average on ages with babies dying at a month old and men from 50 to 70, it can be seen how the average is reduced, and per contra how it is kept up by reducing the infant mortality.

BIG DEPOSITS

Twenty-nine of our large corporations had $181 million dollars in cash and investment securities "balled away" at the beginning of the year, Wall Street Journal says.

Uncle George, explaining to Rollo, will find it hard to reconcile this with the fact that high taxes are impoverishing industry. And the $181 millions are less than half of the total working capital of the 29 industrial plants. They may, however, need every dollar of it in the next ten years. After every period of inflation comes one of liquidation and decline.

SMALLER CROPS

Smaller crops than last year, but they'll be bigger than the 10-year average. That is the government forecast. It is the most important item in the news to millions of American farmers, especially since one of their main problems has been overproduction of something close to it.

Give us an old-fashioned crop failure and no farmer will kick about the price of wheat. But isn't it better to sell three bushels of wheat at $1 each than two bushels at $1.25?

STOCKS

Harvard University has $1 million dollars of general investments. About a fifth is in stocks, the rest in bonds and real estate mortgages.

The average dollar of its stock holdings is divided: 25 cents in industrial stocks, 20 in railroad stocks, 20 in real estate stocks, 16 in public utilities.

Before copying its system, remember that, for instance, while industrial stocks in general may be a good buy, it all depends on picking the right ones instead of the weak sisters.

The high school boys, and the girls also, made a splendid showing in their field day yesterday. This is always an event of great interest to the entire community and the execution of the various drills seems to be more perfect every year. The marching of the girls yesterday along the streets was highly praised by everybody who saw them, while the evolutions carried out on the common delineated a gathering of many thousands.

If Canada sends an ambassador to Washington, so will the Irish Free State. And if both be so represented, Australia, South Africa and New Zealand may wish to enjoy an equal distinction. Thus far only independent nations have been so represented in diplomacy; and it is doubtful whether Washington would care to have that rule changed.

We can enforce the prohibition law upon our own ships, but not upon those of foreign nations. We cannot interfere with the cargoes of foreign ships even though they be made up of intoxicating liquors. To attempt to do anything else will only create trouble and make us ridiculous.

A word of caution may be necessary to the youngsters to avoid swimming in the drivers and canals. The municipal bathing pool will soon be open and then everybody will have an opportunity to have a swim under the eye of the life savers.

The new graduate just out from school will begin to think when it will be his turn to be president of these United States.

The attempt to prevent a referendum on the gasoline tax shows a desire to defeat the purpose of the referendum.

Quarter Century Ago

Says the old Sun: "Old Glory was raised over Odd Fellows hall on Bridge street by Contraville long, I. O. O. F., last night. It was intended to hold the exercises in the open air but on account of the rain, the program was carried out in the hall. (George H. Taylor presided and the speakers included Rev. Mr. Millington, Rev. J. E. Wilson, and Rev. George S. Johnson. The orchestra played the 'Star Spangled Banner' as the folds of the flag were unfurled over the platform."

Orders For Memorial Day

On May 26, W. H. I. Hayes, chief marshal of the Memorial day parade, and W. W. Tuttle, chief of staff, issued general orders for the parade. The post commanders also issued orders for their respective organizations.

Troop F Offered Its Services

On May 27, Troop F Cavalry met at the town hall in Chelmsford and after conducting their regular drill, Captain Shaw announced that the services of the troop were tendered to the government and that the troop awaited orders. The announcement was received with great applause.

John L. MacVicar

From the old Sun: "Mr. John L. MacVicar, who has been connected with the Merrimack Mfg. company as engineer, left last night for New York to report on the U. S. Steamship Caesar, having received an appointment as assistant engineer. He was at one time first assistant engineer of the American liner St. Louis."

Presented Urn For Soldiers' Lot

The old Sun has a large picture of a stone urn presented by the James A. Garfield Women's Relief Corps to the trustees of soldiers' lot in the Lowell cemetery. It was dedicated on May 28, being the Saturday preceding Memorial Day. Speaking of the event, the old Sun said: "On May 28, 1902, G.A.R., the Women's Relief Corps, Sons and Daughters of Veterans, members of the city government, and a number of local ministers were present at the exercises. The urn was filled with beautiful flowers, the inscription on the base read as follows: 'Erected by James A. Garfield Women's Relief Corps, May 28, 1902. A tribute of gratitude to the Union soldiers and sailors who served in the Civil war, 1861-1865.'"

"O, ye who rest in nameless graves, Unmarked because unknown, We cherish the memory of your deeds Angels have heard your story, And God knows all your names."

"Beneath the crossed guns on one side of the base is the inscription, 'To the unknown dead.'"

The exercises were conducted by the James A. Garfield Post 120, G.A.R., Commander Smiley presiding, Mrs. Robinson, S.V.C., and Mary Elliot, B. S. responded for the state officers of the Women's Relief Corps. After patriotic selections by the band, the patriotic song 'America' and the benediction was pronounced by Rev. Smith T. Ford.

Memorial Day Parade

On May 30, Memorial day was observed by an imposing parade and turnout of the Grand Army veterans and civic organization. The military band usually in line was waiting for the companies had all been drafted into service for the war in Cuba.

Speaking of the observance, the Sun said: "This is the day in which the nation honors its fallen heroes by strewing their graves with flowers and recounting the noble sacrifices by which they saved the Union, making it one and inseparable and for many patriotic memories for it is impossible to listen to the recital of the battles of the Civil war without being thrilled with fervid patriotism and inspired with the highest admiration of the men who shed their blood so freely on the altar of liberty that our country might live forever as one grand and united nation, the freest, the greatest, and grandest on earth, and yet as nations go, only in its infancy."

There was a fine turnout of all the veterans for, although they were unable to enter the service in the war with Spain, they were aroused to patriotic enthusiasm and watched with the keen interest every step of the parade from the telling of the movement of troops or the maneuvering of the battle fleets.

K. of C. Sowed to Capt. McNulty

The old Sun states that a delegation from the Knights of Columbus on May 26 went to Camp Devens at Framingham and sowed to Capt. McNulty, president of the post, a large number of seeds. Philip McNulty of the Ninth regiment with a sword. The presentation was made at company's headquarters and the lieutenant made a notable response.

Noted Cannoteists in Lowell

Says the old Sun: "About 25 members of the Eastern division of the American canoe association opened the annual spring meet at Tenka Island, by invitation of the Vesper Country Club, on Saturday afternoon, May 26. The men remained in camp Saturday night and on Sunday had some practice on the river. At that time Paul Taylor was one of the most distinguished canoeists in the United States."

Searching For Spanish Fleet

About this time 25 years ago, the country was still waiting for the battle between the American and the Spanish fleets. The American ships were cruising along the coast and keeping all the harbors of Cuba and Porto Rico under close blockade and everywhere searching for the Spanish fleet. There were then no airplanes to fly over the Cuban harbors in search of the fleets which were supposed to be in hiding. Commander Schley announced that he had reason to believe that the Spanish fleet was in southern harbor and said that if it was it would never return to Spain. The prediction was verified, although not until July 4th was the Spanish fleet destroyed.

THE PRETTIEST GIRL

Ten dollars in gold was presented to Miss Annie Bombardier of 34 Fulton street, a Polish girl, last night, after she was judged to be the prettiest girl who had been at the grounds of the California Exposition now showing in Lowell.

A Thought

The ways to enrich are many, and most of them foul. Parsimony is one of the best, and yet is not innocent; for it withholdeth men from works of liberality and charity.—Bacon.

Another Day Dried

"Has nobody called during my two days' absence?" said the doctor to the office boy. "I left this slate here for callers to write their names on, and it is perfectly clean." "Oh, yes," said the boy. "Lots of people came and the slate got so full of names that this morning I had to rub them out to make room for more."

An Awful Fix

"You seem blue these days, old chap," remarked Percy. "Yes," agreed Alfred, "my girl says I don't love her." "O, well, they often say that," comforted Percy. "But why in your case?" "You see, I'm engaged to one of 'twins," said Alfred. "Well, as the other plained Alfred, 'When I call they usually enter the parlor together. If I hesitate that's bad and if I kiss the wrong girl that's worse.'"

A Patient Waiter

He was a very patient and long-suffering young man, but when at last he arrived at the corner where they had arranged to meet he ventured a remonstrance. "Darling, you are late," he said mildly. "Only a few minutes," she protested in an injured tone. "I said I'd be here at 7 o'clock and it's 20 minutes past." "O," sighed the young man, "then you must have mistaken the day. I've been waiting here since last night."—Philadelphia Enquirer.

Time Is Cruel

An old Scotswoman, much against her will, was induced to sit for her picture, the first she had had taken since she was a girl in her teens. When the photograph was handed to her she failed to recognize herself. She thought there must be some mistake. "Is this me?" she asked. "Yes, take," said the photographer. "And now," said the old woman, "the old lady is speaking at her counterpart, ready to take for a full minute in silence. 'Axeel!' she said, resignedly. 'It's a humblin' sight.'"

Before Prohibition

A senator who had been imbibing slightly paused before a door attended by a steady old doorknocker. "George," said the statesman, "you must have been here for a long time. I have been here for 20 years myself and you were a fixture when I first came to the senate." "Thank you, senator, I have kept this door for 33 years," said the doorknocker. "You have kept that door as well as Horatius kept the bridge."

Names Her Substitute

The Rev. Mr. Tuttle was new in Hartburg and was making his first call upon the Curtis family. Mrs. Curtis did not think she was suitably dressed to receive the new minister, so she sent little Gladys to the door to admit him and to entertain him until she might dress. The preacher and Gladys got along famously and in a few minutes were intimately acquainted. "You're a fine little girl," the preacher told Gladys. Then, reaching out and taking her hand, "would you give me a kiss?" Gladys, however, was a bit doubtful in this proposition. She bashfully pulled away and ran to her mother. "Mamma! Mamma!" she exclaimed. "The new preacher wants to kiss me." "Why, that's all right," mother assured her. "You would give him a kiss if I were you." This instructed from mother, Gladys went back into the parlor. "Well, are you going to give me that kiss now?" the preacher asked. "Well, no, I can't kiss you," Gladys answered, "but mamma says she will."—Kansas City Star.

A Meticulous Memory

"I remember, I remember," said Alonzo Hiram Lee. "The house where I was born among the oaks and hickories. The shingle roof that always leaked, the rainy windows, the mottled green and gray with weather stains. The broken bucket in the well—it weighed at least a ton. The heat and cold in which I toiled, alas! from sun to sun. The combed mattress on my bed that tortured me all night. The posters that commenced to crawl long hours before the light."

"There wasn't any radio or any phonograph. Or colored Sunday supplements to make a fellow lurch. We didn't have a telephone and so we had to bring our plows and tea and salt and every little thing. We didn't have a handy car in which to swiftly go. But had to hitch old Dobbin up and go—but he was slow. We had no parcel post, nor did we have a parcel post. And schooling was a luxury that few of us could boast."

"I remember, I remember, the house where I was born. The carpet in the sitting room in holes and tatters worn. The ancient bureau with broken springs and colonies of moths. The thick white china cups and plates and green and blue and red and blue and green. The fact I had no second suit or nickel in my jeans. The straight hard-bottomed kitchen chairs—I ache all over you. I remember, I remember, but I wish I could forget."

REFUGE

When the world is all of a golden glow,
And the blood in your veins is a tingling flow,
And joy is calling you to and fro
Where laughter echoes and songs ring true;
It's an irksome thought that you have to slave
At a task afar from the play you crave,
And often and often you rail and rave
At the daily work that you've GOT to do.

How glad you'd be if you dared to drop
The work of office or farm or shop,
If you could only afford to stop
Whenever the impulse bade you to,
And scamper away to have your fling,
Like a capering lamb in the flush of spring;
Ah, often enough it's a wearisome thing,
The daily work that you've GOT to do.

But when, with sorrow and woe and pain,
You're sick of heart and of soul and brain,
And your courage is crumpling beneath the strain,
And skies are sullen and gray to view;
Ah then, you're glad that a task is therel
A rock to cling to 'mid seas of care,
And the thing that shall rescue you from despair
Is the daily job that you've GOT to do!

MAN ABOUT TOWN

Postmaster X. A. Delisle, in speaking of the plan now in operation at the postoffice to give the men shorter hours on Saturday, said that it was only fair that they should have it as in almost every other industry, but this new ruling does not give the men half-a-day a week off, but it gives them a couple of hours each week, and during the summer months especially this will be greatly appreciated.

In a little sketch, something after the style of a "Who's Who" column that is popular in American papers, a London daily describes Charlie Chaplin partly as follows: "Qualified for the post (as peer in the kingdom of Shiland) by an imitation of an oyster with a quaint habit of walking in an easterly-westerly direction, and by a certain dexterity in the use of American canned pies as weapons of offense. Invented a new weapon, the dancing Great War. England takes great credit for Charlie as he was born, 'apparently in several places in Kensington and Brixton, about 1889.'" tion in Liberty hall. Commander Costello, president, read a telegram from Lieut. Gov. Fuller, to the effect that he was unable to attend the third state department conference of Disabled Veterans owing to pressure of business. He expressed a wish that the delegates might meet with success in their efforts to better their conditions.

Capt. William J. Blake, representing Dr. Crossman, head of the Veterans' bureau, was introduced. The captain stated that Dr. Crossman was attending a meeting of Disabled Veterans at Providence, R. I., and as a result was unable to be present in Lowell. The speaker declared that officials of the Veterans' bureau felt as though the disabled ex-service men were not for employers, because if it were not for the fact that there were men unable to carry on, as before their entry into the service, the department would have no reason to exist.

Captain Blake painted in glowing terms and phrases the splendid work that was being done for the disabled men and that continual changes and regulations were being made to facilitate the handling of rehabilitation, education, training, and compensation. NEW HAMPSHIRE REPUBLICANS NOT YET SPLIT OVER SPEECHES OF SENATOR MOSES

Moses Feared at Washington—Attitude of Lodge and Walsh on World Court Anxiously Awaited—Woman's Parliament to Be Set Up in Washington to Discuss Measures before Congress Simultaneously and to Criticize Those Who Do Not Follow Their Dictation

(Special to The Sun)

WASHINGTON, May 26.—Certain republicans in New Hampshire are predicting a big split in that party when the presidential inauguration is at hand, owing to the differences on international policies held by President Harding and Senator George H. Moses, whose shoulders received the mantle of party leadership in the Granite state when it fell from the late Senator Gallinger, whose death caused a senatorial vacancy which Moses was quickly elected to fill.

Senator Moses, leader of the Irreconcilable element in the senate and since his return from Europe a few weeks ago, has been busy telling the public through press interviews, just what he thinks of the proposition an put forward by President Harding for a "World Court."

"Better make the 1924 ticket Harding and Coolidge," said the New Hampshire senator facetiously, when asked his opinion.

All the same prediction of a big party split between the factions in New Hampshire is a little premature, according to local advisers obtainable in Washington.

The "center of the court men" are the same men who favored the League of Nations, even including Article X. They are now counting on help from the federal office holders in the Granite state who were elected in plumes that fell to their lot to appointments made by Mr. Harding.

But it should also be remembered that not a single federal appointment worth the taking has been made in New Hampshire during the Harding administration, that was endorsed by Senator Moses, and further, it was Senator Moses who picked out the men and urged the president to appoint them. The case of the appointment of Dr. Crossman as head of the New England Branch of the Veterans Bureau is a good illustration of the senator's attitude.

Against the efforts of the entire Massachusetts house delegation, against a Rhode Island candidate, and in the face of other opposition, the man recommended by Senator Moses, got the appointment handed down. If the court wins out in New Hampshire, sentiment, it will be on grounds other than a breach between the president and the senator.

Lodge and Walsh

Senator Lodge and Senator Walsh of Massachusetts are reckoned by poll-takers, an uncertain in their stand on the world court. Senator Lodge will fight shy of it unless convinced it does not even distantly resemble the League of Nations; Senator Walsh was so opposed to the league with its Article X, that his stand on the court will be regarded as uncertain, until he makes a statement of his own.

Senator Walsh is now in Europe making first hand investigation of the situation over there, and when he returns will undoubtedly have made up his mind as to what course to follow. Senator Walsh is a determined and aggressive fighter of any cause of which he does not approve. His speeches in the senate on the League of Nations attracted wide attention and his attitude on the court is waited with great interest. Whichever stand he takes he is certain to make strong speeches in support of his opinions, and as he is one of the best orators on the democratic side of the chamber, he will be listened to with marked attention.

An Honest Woman

Representative Woodruff of Michigan believes he has found the most conscientious woman in the country. He locates her in his own state and gives her name as Mrs. Josephine Rainey.

It seems when Mr. Woodruff sent out notices that free government seeds could be obtained from him on application, Mrs. Rainey wrote asking for some. She had never seen a franked envelope until the seeds reached her in one bearing the words "3300 penalty for private use." Mrs. Rainey thought the words private use referred to the user of the government seeds. Instead of the sender, as was the case. So she immediately penned Mr. Woodruff a letter of explanation in which she said in part: "I am a very old woman and make my garden entirely for my own use, so I use such seeds are not meant for me. What shall I do with them? Shall I return them to you? I have not used any of them and am very sorry to have made you so much trouble, but I did not understand they were not for private persons."

Mr. Woodruff replied explaining the meaning of the words private use and moreover franked her an additional lot of seeds in the next mail.

The President's Trip

The trip to Alaska which the president and secretaries of commerce and agriculture will take this summer, is expected to furnish material for appropriations for Alaska when the winter session opens. An immense amount of money has already been expended there and the question of what is best to be done next will be a topic of wide discussion. Alaska has a delegate in congress who is allowed to speak from the floor on Alaskan matters when they are before congress, but he has no vote.

The Woman's Parliament

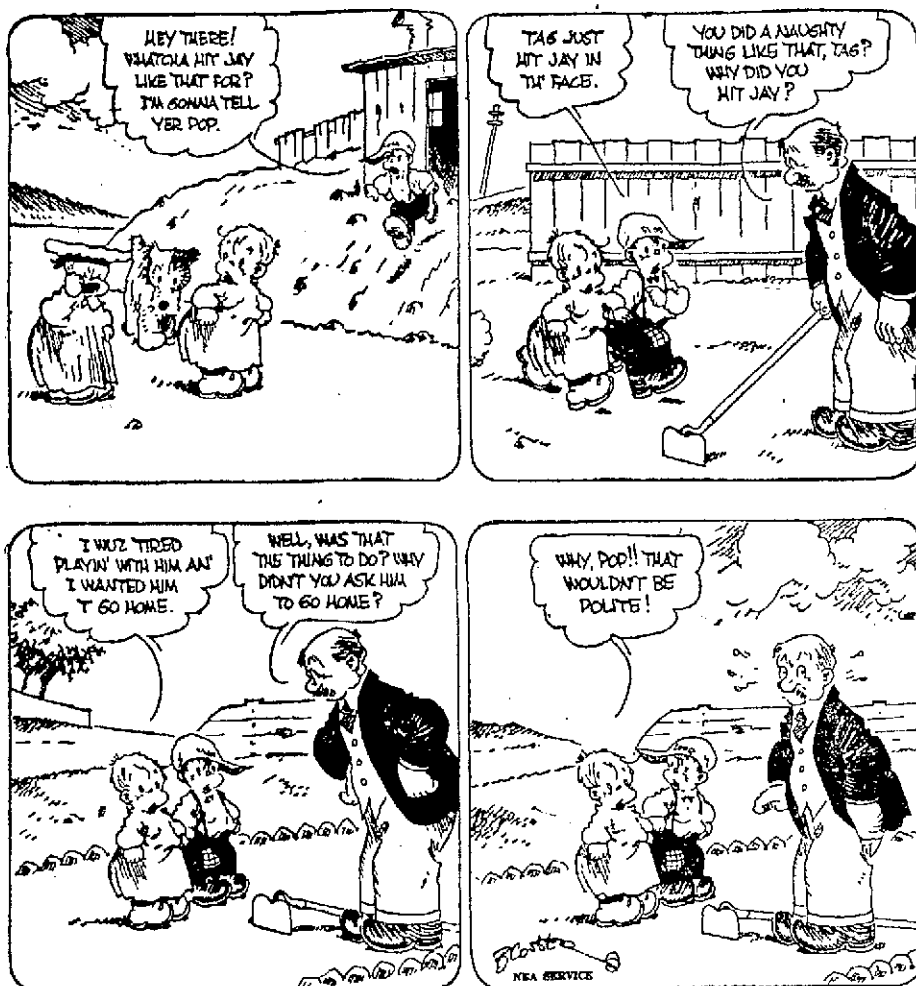

And now the Woman's National Party proposes to have a congress of its own, right under the eyes of the capital at Washington. The party will call it the Woman's Parliament, and it is being organized by the element of the woman's party that was especially militant during the campaign for suffrage. Mrs. Belmont and Miss Alice Paul being leaders in the movement. Mrs. Belmont states that with the coming of congress in December the parliament will likewise open and will have daily meetings and discussions of the same topics that are before congress at that moment. Later they intend to erect a big house of parliament of their own, but for the present the meetings will be held at the headquarters of the organization which are directly opposite the capitol, and which they have christened "The Watchtower," as they keep women there all the time to watch the proceedings of congress and make a record—carefully, of course, indexed—of how every member of the senate and house has voted on matters in which they are especially interested. They also keep a record of his personal history, sometimes quite an intimate one so it is said, and are ready to confront a lawless legislator with a storm of protest backed up by their indexed evidence, if he speaks or votes against their convictions.

The Looker-on In Lowell

Clarence M. Weed's term as chairman of the board of park commissioners has expired and people are wondering as to the intention of Mayor Donovan in filling the vacancy, whether by reappointment of Mr. Weed or by a new choice.

Because of Mr. Weed's remarkable record as a naturalist and as chairman of the board for the past several years, he is very valuable asset to the city. Under his leadership and expert direction the parks and playground system of Lowell has been greatly improved so that today Lowell should be proud to have such a man in its service.

Who is Mr. Weed? The following information about Mr. Weed, naturalist, born in Toledo, Ohio; Bachelor of Science, and Master of Science, Michigan Agricultural College; Doctor of Science, Ohio State University; Entomologist and botanist, Ohio Experiment Station; professor of entomology and entomologist in experiment station, N. H. College of Agricultural and Mechanical Arts; instructor of nature study, Lowell Normal School.

Mr. Weed is also author of the following books: Insects and Insecticides; Fungi and Fungicides; Ten New England Blossoms and Their Insect Visitors; Spraying Crops; Life-Histories of American Insects; Stories of Insect Life; Seed Travelers; Insect World; The Flower Beautiful; Birds in Their Relations to Man; Laboratory Guide in Zoology; The Nature Calendar Series; Stories of Bird Life; Wild Flower Families; Our Trees; How to Know Them; The School Garden Book; Farm, Forest and Farm-Products; Seeing Nature First; Crop Production; Butterflies Worth Knowing.

New Freight Car Rolling

Local shippers have been a little troubled recently by a new freight car order affecting an old regulation requiring that all freight cars must be re-outfitted back over the same road by which they arrive at their destination. Locally, it means that all freight cars arriving in Lowell must be sent out of Lowell and back over the same route by which they are shipped into Lowell.

Supposing a local industry gets a shipment of material from the north at its door. If that concern has a rush shipment for the south it cannot use that car from the north because it must be sent out of Lowell via the same route by which it came in. In other words the car from the north must be switched out of the way and another car corresponding to the route by which it is desired to ship to the south must be used.

That is the meaning of the ruling, but it is to be noted that this regulation is an old one, and that it has not been strictly enforced hitherto, whether impractical to do so or not is not known.

A statement by Frank Morgan of the local Boston and Maine freight office explains the matter thus: The Boston and Maine owns 12,313 box cars and at the present time has about 25,000 such cars on its lines. About 15,000 of these cars belong to other roads, most of which are sadly in need of them to protect loading on their own lines. It is only fair to their owners that the shippers on their lines that these cars be returned to them as soon as possible.

Although New England shippers may be inconvenienced temporarily they should not lose sight of the fact that shippers in other parts of the country are not so fortunately situated as regards car supply and it is part of their duty, as well as the railroad's, to see that there is an equitable distribution of cars throughout the entire country. By promptly removing cars as fast as made empty and sending them home, even though empty, two objects are attained: First, it gives an opportunity to move cars up to the consignee as fast as possible, it results in rapidly reducing the number of cars on the line, thus permitting cars to move more freely.

This ruling affects the smaller roads than the big shippers, because the railroads will see to it that the big shippers get just what they want or need. Already instances have been reported in which an industry has shipped by truck because it could not wait for the railroad to switch in a car to be re-routed to the desired point.

Airplane Pictures of Lowell

The Aerial mapping company of America wants to come to Lowell to make aerial maps of the city. Correspondence has already been carried on with the chamber of commerce with the understanding that aerial maps may profitably be used in connection with city planning. Many other cities of the country have used airplane photographs to discover the faults in their layouts and also to learn of the proper advantages for development.

Photographs taken from an airplane show the street, housing, park developments and those parts of the city which should be developed along some comprehensive plan. The camera will not lie, it will point out the mistakes which have been made by letting a city grow unshapely without any intelligent direction.

High School Band

The demonstration given by the high school boys' band on Field day yesterday was a credit not only to the boys but to their instructor, John J. Giblin, and to the city of Lowell. It was a great improvement over previous years when the band consisted of noisy bugles and snare drums. All types of brass instruments are included now and the playing was like that of professionals.

It is the bad, however, that the boys do not have more opportunity for public concerts than just on Field day and on Memorial day. Why not allow the band to parade through the downtown streets during drill hours? It puts "pop" into everybody and to have a band make the rounds of the business streets once or twice a week would cheer up many a tired and weary mind.

It is also possible to keep the band well organized from year to year by adding new material and improving the old? As each year passes probably many of the boys drop out of the band because of extra studies or because they are not inclined to continue the practice, all of which is detrimental to the organization and its work. There is nothing that thrills the public more when the high school boys march along the street than the high school band, particularly as it is developed today, and it seems only right that the instructor, Mr. Giblin, should be given authority to make regulations which might prevent a complete disorganization at the end of each school year. There is such a thing as developing a high school band that might become known throughout the country. Many high schools have done that in football, baseball, track sports, debating. Why can't Lowell do it with its high school band?

No Limit to Advertising

We are all acquainted with advertising by the printed word, the painted sign, the moving picture, and so on, but Lowell was given a demonstration of a new kind of advertising this past week when an aviator wrote upon the sky in white smoke-letters the name of a well known citizen. That exhibition marks the latest and most novel development in the art of advertising. Older people will remember the first attempts at advertising and that they consisted of nothing more than the name and address of a man or woman in business with a very brief statement that he or she had something to sell.

Advertising is now an art despite all its regulations by law and otherwise. Now we have a new problem for reformers, or regulators, or legislators—how to regulate advertising in the sky by airplane. This regulation has already started in Boston where a city councillor pleaded for the necessity of an ordinance prohibiting aerial acrobatics in advertising above the city because of the danger to life below. It would seem that the controlling of the air is a problem far above any city council. At any rate the practice of advertising by airplane smoke-letters has not yet become so menacing as to give any worry to the man and woman on the street. They are simply awed by such an evidence of progress.

With the aviator at such a height as is necessary to make letters in the sky, there is not as much danger as when he flies much lower without tail-fins, nose dips, etc., because in falling from a great height an aviator has an opportunity to right his machine and glide to safety.

Eddie Collins Continues to Play Brilliantly for the Chicago White Sox

AFTER 17 YEARS IN LEAGUE COLLINS CONTINUES TO STAR

White Sox Second Baseman Playing Snappier Game Than Ever, Fielding With Remarkable Brilliance and Threatening to Capture Batting Honors—Batting Averages

CHICAGO, May 26. (By the Associated Press.)—Eddie Collins, star second baseman, with the Chicago White Sox, is the big surprise of the American league season, judging from his performance to date, revealed in averages compiled today.

Collins is playing a snappier game than ever, holding with remarkable brilliancy and is threatening to capture the batting honors of the league—all after 17 years of major league service.

Collins is leading the league in base stealing with 15 thefts, and made the best showing of the bat during the week, increasing his average 25 points to .356 for 29 games, placing him virtually third in the list of leading hitters. Collins having played in more games than others of the first five.

"Babe" Ruth added 24 points to his average of a week ago and bagged four homers, running his string to eight, while Ken Williams of the Browns, who started piling up the circuit blows before "Babe" got his eye on the ball, made only one, which was enough, however, to give him the edge over Ruth in the race.

Ruth also has tied the St. Louis star for total base honors. Ruth's hits, besides his homers, include ten doubles and three triples, while Williams' blows include five doubles

ATHLETICS WIN TWO IN ROW FROM NEW YORK YANKEES

Connie Mack's Rejuvenated White Elephants Remain American League Sensations—New York Giants Continue to Win—Both Boston Teams Won Yesterday.

NEW YORK, May 26.—Connie Mack's rejuvenated Philadelphia Athletics today remained the American league sensations. After their second consecutive victory yesterday over the league champion New York Yankees, critics who did not rate the Athletics high in the pre-season hope conceded that they will finish in the first division.

Not only are the Athletics closing the gap between themselves and the Yankees and filling the seats in Shibe park, but they are drawing away from the strongest of the western teams and tightening a hold on second place that the westerners will find hard to shake when they come back presently. The Athletics got three home runs in beating the Yankees, 4 to 2.

The Detroit Tigers lost ground again by yielding to the effectiveness of Urban Faber and the Chicago White Sox won, 5 to 3. With a chance to catch the drooping Tigers, the Washington Senators fell before Boston, the reliable Walter Johnson weakening after his teammates had given him a two run lead, usually enough for him. The score was 6 to 5.

Pittsburgh won its seventh consecutive contest and the second straight of its series with St. Louis, 2 to 1, tightening its hold on second place in the National league.

The New York steamroller continued to roll over Philadelphia, the Giants outslugging the Quakers, 12 to 5.

Brooklyn slipped from a short stay in the first division, with third position within its grasp up until the ninth inning. Mickey O'Neil, fighting catcher of the Braves, opened a batting rally in the ninth and Boston slipped over five runs, winning 7 to 4. Grover Cleveland Alexander let down Cincinnati with two hits and Pete Donohue, who has fared badly in recent starts, was given poor support, the Cubs passing both the Cardinals and Robins and resting in third place. The score was 4 to 0. The Cleveland-St. Louis American game was called off because of rain.

Intercontinental Results

NEW YORK, May 26.—(By the Associated Press.) The first intercontinental series this season in the National and American leagues, concluded this week, gives the western clubs, as a unit, a slight edge over the eastern quartet in the senior circuit, while the eastern section in the junior league has a margin of eight games over their western rivals.

In the National league 47 games were played, of which western clubs won 21 and eastern clubs 21. The New York Giants and Brooklyn upheld the eastern division, winning seven of the 22 eastern victories. Pittsburgh and St. Louis made the best records of the western quartet.

The outstanding feature of the intercontinental tilt in both circuits was the showing of the New York Yankees, who won 12 games and lost only four. The record is the more remarkable when it is considered that the Yankees were one of the traveling teams. Detroit was the only western club to win the American league champions. St. Louis made the best showing of the western clubs, getting an even break in 12 games. Forty-six games were played, of which eastern clubs won 27 and the western clubs 19.

HEAVY FIRING IS REPORTED

Heard in Vicinity of Paotzuku
Stronghold of Suchow
Train Bandits

Brigands May Have Encountered Chinese Government
Troops

TIENTSIN, May 25.—(By the Associated Press)—Considerable mystery is attached to heavy firing heard about six miles north of Tsaochwang last night in the direction of Paotzuku stronghold of the Suchow train bandits, according to advices received here.

It is assumed that the brigands may have encountered government troops and are attempting to escape to the hills in the rear of Paotzuku or that more bandits have joined the outlaws who are holding the foreign captives in the mountains and the combined forces are attempting to break the government cordon, which is supposed to have surrounded the mountain retreat. Another theory is that the bandits were fighting among themselves.

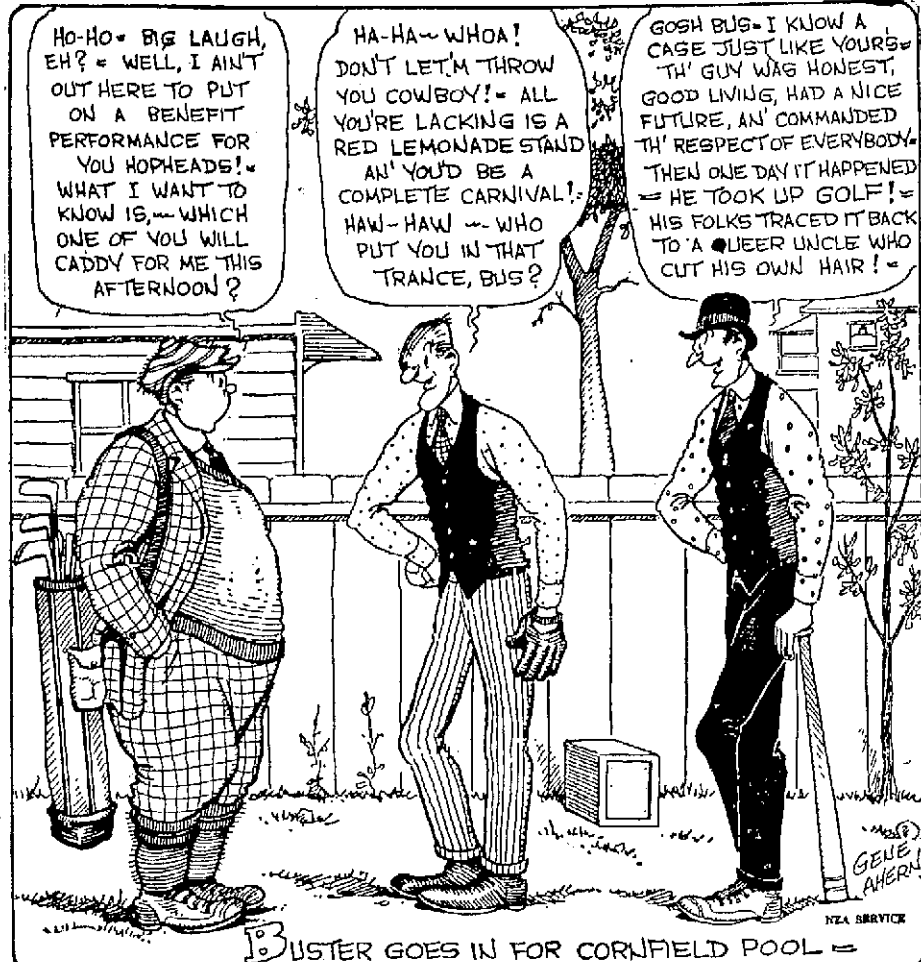

Although messengers arriving from Paotzuku informed the relief workers at Tsaochwang that the captives had been removed two miles farther back in the mountains, letters received from the bandit stronghold do not mention the removal.

A letter sent out by John R. Powell, Shanghai newspaperman, stated that the bandits now demand that the Chinese government enroll 10,000 of their number in the army. This would give them control of the southern part of Shantung province. In addition, it was stated, the brigands ask a half year's pay, which they claim as due for previous army service.

A deputation of local gentry returned to Tsaochwang from the Paotzuku stronghold with the information that the bandits had agreed to send a representative under escort together with a paroled captive to treat with government officials for the release of the foreign prisoners.

Previous cable dispatches from Shanghai stated that John R. Powell had been paroled by the bandits to take part in new conferences for the release of the captives.

Jack Daw's Adventures. Chapter 8

Out into the open air went the flying horse, with Jack and Flighty hanging on as tight as they could. As soon as they were clear of the Cloud Palace Jack looked down and saw the old king bounding along from one cloud to another. Then his attention was attracted by a small black speck far away.

As the flying horse sped along this blackness came nearer and nearer until Jack discovered that it was a flock of geese, flying in a V shape. Flighty explained that that was the way geese always flew, with the leader of the flock at the head. Then the leader goose pulled away from the rest.

"I'll bet that big goose wants to race with us," shouted Jack. "Well," replied Flighty, "we'll show him that our flying horse can travel much faster than he can." And with that the race started. Faster and faster went the goose, and faster and faster went the flying horse. (Continued.)

NEARING CENTURY MARK ONE SOLDIER KILLED

Edmund Brickett of Dover Street Observes His 92nd Birthday

Nearing the century mark and still possessed of all his senses, Edmund Brickett, of 65 Dover street, who is quietly observing his 92nd birthday at his home today, surrounded by friends whom he has watched grow up from their school days.

But sorrow and worry marks Mr. Brickett's face today, for his only daughter lies seriously ill at her home, 1802 Commonwealth avenue, Boston, and her life is despaired of by her physicians.

Mr. Brickett traces his ancestry back to the early days of the republic.

his father being born in 1787 in the little town of Newbury, Vt., and lived to the ripe old age of 86, dying in Newbury, Vt., on Feb. 10, 1853. His mother was born in Peacham, Vt., in 1800, and died in Danville, Vt., Aug. 10, 1874.

Mr. Brickett was born in Peacham, Vt., May 26, 1831, and was the fifth child in his family. He was educated in the public schools of Peacham and Cabot, Vt., and came to Lowell when he was 13 years of age. Upon arriving in Lowell, he entered the employ of the Tremont & Suffolk mills, and after a short while was promoted to foreman of the mill for one year, leaving there to take up a similar position in the Appleton mills, where he remained until 1851.

In January, 1853, Lucy F. Flint of Walden, Vt., came down to Lowell and was united in marriage with Mr. Brickett, the ceremony being performed in the Highland Congregational church. In 1854, Mr. Brickett became ill, so she and her husband removed to Cabot, Vt., where they purchased a farm, and lived there for 15 years, returning to Lowell at the end of that time. After coming back to Lowell, Mr. Brickett conducted a corporation boarding-house for the Tremont & Suffolk mills for over four years, when he disposed of his boarding-house and moved to a coal and wood yard at 6 Cabot street. In addition to running this business, he also did considerable building. In 1886 he retired from the coal and wood business but continued in the building business until 1914.

Two children were born to the couple: Leroy A., who died when 17 years of age, in 1873; and a daughter, Emma M. She married Charles F. Robinson and it is she who is now seriously ill at her home in Boston. She has one son, George Edmund Robertson, a graduate of Cornell college and a master mechanic in the employ of Mead, Morse & Co., in East Boston. He in turn has two children, a boy 8 months old and a girl 5 years old.

The first Mrs. Edmund Brickett lived until 1914, dying at the age of 83 years. Mr. Brickett married again four years ago, his second wife being Mary Goodwin of Windham, N. H., who is still living.

Mr. Brickett has not allowed age to keep him from enjoying present day amusements and conveniences. He likes a good show and manages to see one once in a while. A trip to Boston and every year he goes to Vermont to see the few relatives that are still living and to keep in touch with his home town. He hears as plainly as ever, talks well, remembers things back in the early days, and is able to read without glasses.

He attributes his good health and happy old age mainly to the fact that he has always, up to nine years ago, worked hard and he never used tobacco nor liquor. He is thoroughly modern in his opinions, and believes that every man should work no more or less than eight hours a day, and six days a week if he wants to be happy and live to a good old age.

One thing that strikes Mr. Brickett as a retrogression rather than an advance in modern life is the lack of attendance at church and his opinion is that the folks who used to go to church on Sunday now go auto riding. He can remember well when the Warren street church was filled to overflowing and when they used to take 25 or 30 down to the river quays often to baptize them. Mr. Brickett was drafted for service in the civil war, was thrown out after a physical examination, and he considers this quite a joke as most of the men were seemingly healthier than he is now dead.

MASS ON SOUTH COMMON MEMORIAL DAY

Rev. William F. Mahan, O. M. L., chaplain of the Lowell post of the American Legion, expects that fully 25,000 persons will be present at the out-door mass on the South common on the morning of Memorial day. The mass, in a solemn high, will have as celebrant, Very Rev. Lawrence F. Tighe, O.M.L., pastor of the Immaculate Conception church, assisted by Rev. Daniel J. Heffernan, acting pastor of St. Peter's, as deacon, and Rev. William D. Brennan of St. Margaret's, as sub-deacon. Rev. Fr. Brennan was an overseas chaplain during the war.

Music will be furnished by a choir of 300 mixed voices under the direction of Mr. John J. Kelly. The altar, now under construction, will be situated in the wading pool on the common, a very picturesque spot. Special seats near the altar will be reserved for gold star mothers, the clergy and members of the city government. Outside the special area, reservations will be made by the veterans and semi-military organizations, while the public will form outside a wire fence. Members of Battery B will do police duty, and at the elevation of the host, drums will roll and bugles blow.

The committee in charge of the mass is composed of Rev. William F. Mahan, O.M.L., chairman; Capt. Geo. F. Faneuf, Lieut. Richard D. Donoghue and Lieut. Robert F. Givinar.

FIRST AID CONTEST AT THE AUDITORIUM

On the evening of Thursday, May 31, demonstration of first aid work will be given by the New England Telephone & Telegraph company at the Memorial Auditorium in the form of a championship contest of five teams of employees representing the office of Hyattsville, Brockton, Lawrence, Gloucester and Middlebury, under the supervision of Dr. Daniel L. Lynch, medical director of the company.

The telephone company for the past few years has been making rapid progress in first aid work among thousands of employees. Great interest has been manifested and rivalry developed, to the extent that contests have been necessary to determine to just whom the honors belong. Elimination contests have been held and the five victorious teams are to compete at the Auditorium on the evening of May 31 to determine the championship of the Eastern Massachusetts division, which comprises the territory of the Merrimack valley, North Shore, Framingham and Cape Cod sections. Unfortunately in the elimination contests our Lowell team was defeated by a very narrow margin and by their natural rival, the Lawrence team.

The whole floor of the Auditorium will be available for the contest, all five teams competing at the same time. A full view of all teams competing can be obtained from all seats in the park-like circle and balcony. The spirit of fairness of the telephone company is demonstrated in the selection of the following capable Lowell physicians to act as judges of the contest: H. B. Plunkett, A. R. Gardner, H. B. Plunkett, E. A. Robertson, G. F. Martin and E. A. Robertson.

Another feature of the evening will be the presentation of two Vail medals recently awarded by the telephone company to Miss Olga Wokanda (Mrs. Dustin Hamblett) of Lowell and Miss Elizabeth M. Lonsdale of Lawrence, for team work in accomplishing the capture recently of a murderer. This presentation of these medals will be made by one of the officials of the company while the judges are tabulating their score of the contest.

The first aid contest will commence approximately one and one-half hours, and will be followed by general dancing. Williams Bros. orchestra of New Bedford (10 pieces) composed of employees of the telephone company will furnish the music and they are favorably known throughout New England as masters of jazz music.

Twenty-five young ladies of the Lowell office will officiate as ushers in the uniform of the Red Cross. It is expected that most of the officials of the company from Boston will be present. It is planned that in the near future a contest for the entire company will be held in Merchants hall, Boston. The exhibition is free to the public and will commence at 8 o'clock sharp.

LAUSANNE, May 26.—(By the Associated Press)—Negotiation of separate treaties between Turkey and the other nations to disengage the privileges of foreigners in Turkey, was agreed upon today by the political committee of the Near East conference as the solution of the long-standing dispute over this question. The treaties must be negotiated within a year, Turkey meanwhile maintaining the status quo.

TO PICKET SHOE SHOPS

Brockton Unions Vote to Assign Men to All Factories on Monday

Officers Instruct All That Picketing Must Be Peaceful

BROCKTON, May 26.—Seven unions and the general committee of the Brockton district shoeworkers are making final arrangements today for general picketing of every shoe factory in Brockton that has notified employees that production will be resumed Monday.

The unions voting to have its membership do picket duty include carpenters, tinsmiths, cutters, shoemakers, dressers and packers and leatherers.

The picketing will start at 6:15 and officers of each local have impressed each probable picket that picketing must be peaceful.

The majority of Brockton factories are closed this morning, giving what employees are working a full Saturday holiday instead of the usual half holiday.

A number of manufacturers Friday night showed that nearly every factory will open Monday morning on full time production.

MACHINISTS' UNION HOLDS MEETING

A feature of last evening's meeting of Lodge 138, Machinists' union, which was held in Trades and Labor hall, was the appointment of a committee to canvass the members of the organization relative to the life insurance policies, which the grand lodge is offering to the members between the ages of 18 and 60 years of age.

These policies consist of $500 benefits in case of death at the rate of $6 a year, and it is said that they are being generally approved by the members of the union. Other lodges have adopted the system, it is said, and are very much satisfied with it.

The meeting was presided over by President Barker F. Murphy and considerable business was transacted. It was voted to start an energetic membership campaign in an endeavor to elect under the banner of the organization all the machinists employed in local shops and in order to help the campaign, committee, the union voted to have an open charter for three months, initiation and reinstatement fees being set at $5. The special assessment, which has been carried on since 1920 was called off. This was an assessment taken up for the benefit of strikers in other cities. The lodge voted to hold an outing in the near future and a committee was appointed to make arrangements for the event.

PLEASANT FIELD DAY AFTERMATH

An aftermath of the high school field day exercises yesterday afternoon was a dinner given at Cole's Inn last evening for the drill judges, drill leaders, and Lieut. Joseph Driscoll, of Boston, and Capt. Harry Poulap Brown of Billerica. The affair was not marked by any formality whatsoever but was most enjoyable from a social standpoint. An excellently served hot lobster dinner kept the guests at the tables for nearly two hours.

Each year such a dinner is given by the school authorities as a means of showing their appreciation of the work of the judges, who, of course, receive no compensation for their services.

In addition to the judges there were present Capt. Hugh J. Molloy, drill master Henry H. Harris, James P. Conway, Thomas B. O'Leary, J. Eugene Allen, James B. O'Leary, James P. O'Leary, John J. O'Leary, William F. O'Leary, and Arthur P. Woodcock.

CHARGE CARSHOP MAN WITH LARCENY

A warrant was issued to officers of the Boston & Maine railroad police today for a resident of Melrose, an employee of the Billerica car shops, who, it is claimed, has been taking material from the carshops in Billerica for some time.

Lieut. Arthur A. Arscough and Inspector Cole of the B. & M. police, and Lieut. Inspector Fahey and Officer Eaton and the Melrose police yesterday procured a search warrant and searched this man's house and found a number of blankets, sheets, pillows, chairs, and a variety of other articles valued at about $100, which they say were taken from the car shops. As a result of their find, the railroad police appeared in the clerk of court's office this morning and swore out a warrant. This warrant will not be served as they believe the man will answer a summons to appear in the local court next Monday, but if by any chance he does not appear, the warrant will be ready for his arrest.

Until the warrant is served or the man appears in court he does not come under the court's jurisdiction so his name can not be made public, but Clerk Trull acknowledged that the warrant had been issued and that he would be summoned into court next Monday.

"WORLD FULL OF MENACE"—DENBY

Secretary Warns That Navy Must Be Kept Ready For Defense

Great Need for Close Study of Naval Science and Earnest Devotion to Duty

NEWPORT, R. I., May 26.—Warning that the navy must be kept ready for defense, "in a world full of menace," was given by Secretary Denby in an address today to the graduating class of the Naval War college. At no time in the nation's history, he added, had there been greater need for "close study of naval science and earnest devotion to duty."

"It is a day when naval strength is vitally necessary and a full grasp by naval officers of the world possibilities is highly important," Mr. Denby continued. "We think in terms of hope for continued peace; we strive through diplomacy, backed by power, to keep that desired peace, but we must not be blind to facts."

"We know now beyond peradventure that war between great powers, or groups of nations, will always involve many other nations, and we cannot have any certainty that such a war may not come at any time. There need be no demand for excessive armament. There will be none for great increase of our present establishment made by the navy department. We shall continue a policy of conservation, allowing for the possibility of the limitation of armament. We shall ask for additional light draft gunboats, the vital need of which is being demonstrated every day; and we shall ask for certain submarines and airplanes."

"There will be nothing extravagant in our recommendations to congress under the program which we are submitting. We shall ask for approximately proposed appropriations reached last year. While, therefore, we do not anticipate the need of a great building program, we do realize that what we have must be in constant readiness for effective use."

The secretary referred to such controversies between advocates of service as that between advocates of aviation and the capital ship as often "unnecessary and misleading."

There should be no belittling of the scope and power of the various arms of our sea forces, he declared, "no exaggeration of one at the cost of another. On the other hand, there should be no lessening in the supply and development and full supply of all new arms."

AN EXCELLENT CONCERT MEMORIAL DAY PARADE

Normal School Girls' Glee Club and Orchestra at the Auditorium

The girls' Glee club and orchestra of the State Normal school combined their talent last evening to present a most enjoyable concert at the Memorial Auditorium before a friendly audience that was larger numerically than might have been anticipated for this season of the year.

To hold this annual event outside of the school was a new departure, but it worked out so successfully that undoubtedly such a plan will be followed in future years.

The Glee club was assisted by the following soloists: Mrs. Florence Schroeder, soprano; Miss Doris Sweet and Miss Helen Bagshaw, pianists; and Miss Catherine Eaton and Miss Ruth Ward, violinists.

The concert was given under the capable direction of Miss Inez Field Damon, head of the department of music.

In many respects the program given was worthy of commendation. It did not follow the trend of programs usually given by school organizations, in fact, departed radically from it, to include works by such composers as Gershwine, Beethoven, Gaden, Chadevick, Elgar, Morley and Korsakoff Kreisler.

The Glee club sang splendidly as a body and throughout showed a keen sense of proper shading and well rounded tone when the text demanded. The work of the several soloists was distinctly high grade, the mezzo-soprano voice of Mrs. Schroeder being notable for its clearness and beauty.

The members of the Glee club are: First soprano—Isabelle Doran, Grace Finnegan, Dorothy Graham, Violet Hobson, Edna Lawrence, Mary Martin, Margaret McEwen, Anna Noonan, Margaret Reynolds, Anastasia Shea, Angela Sheehan, Verona Tierney.

Second soprano—Mildred Brenner, Gladys Dugdale, Eleanor Harrington, Ruth McEwen, Agnes Nolin, Frances Richardson, Florence Schroeder, Rita Seully, Marian Smith.

First alto—Eugenia Barlett, Esther Cardozo, Esther Faby, Marion Garvey, Kathleen Hart, Mildred Murray, Ruby Spencer, Alberta Waterhouse, Margaret Weed, Ruth Whetton.

Second alto—Barbara McAdams, Ida Palenon, Rose Portlock, Katherine Butler, Agnes Reusch, Lillian Schae, Marion Shing, Catherine Sullivan.

The orchestra is composed of the following students: First violin, Edna Lawrence and Ruth Ward; second violin, Josephine O'Neil and Katherine Kearney; first cello, Emma Brenner; second cello, Mrs. Schroeder; viola, Bernice Russell; bells, Alice Kelly; drums, Violet Hobson; piano, Doris Sweet.

The committee of the local post in charge of the arrangements for Poppy day pointed out this forenoon that the poppies each sold cost each and unless each gift is more than the receipts and profits will not be large.

About 40 young women were on the streets selling the flowers before 9 o'clock this morning and their numbers were increased by nearly a score in the afternoon.

Headquarters for the day are in Memorial hall, where a committee of the post and one from the auxiliary care for all details. The personnel of the post committees is: Commander David F. Caddell, Senior Vice Commander Frank E. Hart, Adj. Wm. C. Kirk, Thomas W. Vickers, Leo Krug and John Shea.

The auxiliary committee includes Mrs. Lilla Pearson, Mrs. Jeanie Everett, Mrs. Rose Coleman, Mrs. Sarah McBride and Mrs. Corinne Tetreault.

DOG BITES LITTLE GIRL

The girl, according to the report, was playing and not paying attention to the dog when it jumped upon her. The dog was taken by the police and placed in quarantine to determine whether or not it is afflicted by the rabies.

Both orders were introduced in the council by Councilman John W. Daly and were favorably acted upon there. For sanitary improvements $7,500 was stipulated and for paying, $9,000.

FORMER MAYOR THOMPSON TAKES OVER THE THORNDIKE COAL AND GRAIN COMPANY

Perry D. Thompson, former mayor, one of Lowell's best known citizens, with a personal acquaintanceship probably more extensive than that enjoyed by any other man in the city, has purchased outright the Thorndike Coal and Grain Co. from David Ziskind and now is in full control of the business.

The transfer was consummated this week, with Mr. Thompson actually taking over the plant on Tuesday. Under the terms of the transaction, the coal and grain departments of the business have been divided, with Mr. Ziskind retaining the grain sales and Mr. Thompson handling the coal. No partnership has been formed and each subdivision of the business will be operated independent of the other.

In assuming control of the Thorndike Co., Mr. Thompson takes over a business that dates back nearly 100 years and which for several generations has been operated at its present location in Thorndike street. No little sentiment is interwoven in the history of the plant and because of its longevity and distinction of remaining on one site since its establishment in 1828, it is a business that has gained national recognition. It was in 1829 that William Livingston established the coal, grain and lumber business at the location which now is 15 Thorndike street. At his death in 1855, the business was taken over by his son, William E. Livingston and from that time until 1913, when purchased by David Ziskind, the business was operated under the name of the Wm. E. Livingston Co. With Mr. Ziskind's entrance into the establishment, the firm name was changed to the Thorndike Coal and Grain Co., but to hundreds of old Lowell families it remained the old Livingston company and probably will for many more.

First Execution in Occupied Zone

DUESSELDORF, May 26.—(By the Associated Press)—Albert Sehlager was executed by French troops today for sabotage on railroads in the occupied region, and other offenses. He was shot in a stone quarry near a cemetery and his body was delivered forthwith to the cemetery authorities. This is the first execution in the occupied zone. Sehlager was escorted to the quarry by two priests and went unflinchingly to his death. Ten shots were fired at him. Besides sabotage, Sehlager, a former Prussian officer, was convicted by a French court martial of espionage and association with criminals. He admitted he had blown up railroad tracks and bridges. The French regarded him as a chief of the murder gangs which have been carrying on a campaign of terror against the occupation of the Ruhr.

PARIS, May 26.—(By the Associated Press)—The French government has asked Great Britain and Italy through their ambassadors in Paris, to join it in making urgent representations to Athens to the effect that the allies are determined not to become involved in a possible Turco-Greek conflict and would neither prevent the Turkish army from crossing to Thrace nor allow the Greek fleet to enter the Dardanelles.

FRUIT DEALER FELL FOR FLIM-FLAM GAME

At certain intervals, it seems flim-flam workers invade Lowell and victimize unsuspecting individuals with their cleverly concocted schemes. A local fruit dealer yesterday allowed himself to be swayed by a get-rich-quick plan of two unknown men and as a result he is six hundred dollars short today.

According to the story told the police, the two men told the dealer that they were from the city of New York and that they had a large quantity of fruit which they were going to sell in Lowell. They offered him a large sum of money for the fruit, but he was suspicious and refused. They then offered him a large sum of money for a small quantity of fruit, which he accepted. They then took him to a place where they had a large quantity of fruit and he was told that he had to sell it all at once. He did so and received a large sum of money, but when he went home, he found that the money was all gone and that he was six hundred dollars short.

PARIS, May 26.—(By the Associated Press)—Apprehension was expressed today that M. SUPREME COURT FINDS AUTO TRUCK NOT FARMING IMPLEMENT AND NOT TAX-EXEMPT

One of the most important tax decisions ever given in the state is that handed down by the supreme court when it upholds the finding of the superior court in the case brought against the city of Lowell by a. Thorndike Trull, who sought the abatement of taxes levied on automobile trucks used on his farm in Andover street, claiming they were farming implements and, therefore, tax-exempt.

Judge Sisk of the superior court first heard the case and found for the city and then referred it to the supreme court. Justice Crosby's finding coincides with that of Judge Sisk and in brief, says the Lowell board of assessors, was justified and within its rights to tax the trucks owned by the defendant.

Although the suit was a friendly one it was of unusual importance, especially as it will apply to towns in the state where extensive farming is carried on.

Annual High School Field Day Attracts Thousands of Spectators to Common

BOY AND GIRL OFFICERS IN FLAG MARCH

Another field day has come and gone and high school pupils have acquitted themselves just as creditably as those of other years, who through a succession of these annual and colorful events have established a standard difficult to equal and unsurpassed by any other school in the country.

Fully 10,000 men, women and children witnessed the event yesterday, and the South common, after a succession of these annual and colorful events have established a standard difficult to equal and unsurpassed by any other school in the country.

Nothing came up to mar the exercise and the program was run through from start to finish without the semblance of a hitch or unnecessary intervals of waiting and inaction. The fact that at 5 o'clock the exhibition was completed, shows the efficiency at which the events were run off.

Atmospherically also, the day was ideal for such an event and although the sun was unusually hot in the early afternoon a cooling breeze tempered it somewhat and no one seemed to complain too much.

While the annual field day program is scheduled to show what the common accomplishes along the line of military drill and physical education for students in all four classes and succeeds admirably in doing just that, the spirit of competition enters into the picture quite forcibly and properly so, for it is the paper-knife and the undoubtedly leads to greatly improve the different maneuvers.

How Prizes Were Awarded

Yesterday there was company and individual competition for the boys' regiment, with prizes being won as follows:

Individual drill—First, gold medal, Private Henry Cluff, Co. B; second, silver medal, Color Sergeant, Thurlow MacBryne; third, bronze medal, Color Sergeant, Marshall Forrest.

Company drill—First, blue pennant, Co. B; second, red pennant, Co. F; third, green pennant, Co. C; fourth, yellow pennant, Co. D.

Butler Manual—First, purple pennant, Co. F; second, blue pennant, Co. B; third, red pennant, Co. C; fourth, yellow pennant, Co. D.

Thus it will be seen that Co. F, commanded by Capt. Webster, took first honors by capturing two prizes, with Co. B close on its heels, with a first prize for company drill and the gold medal being won by a private in its ranks.

The girls' battalions never have competed for prizes, but on the whole have done more precisely than the boys, march better and all in all give a more finished performance, although perhaps military drill with rifles cannot properly be compared with dumb-bell, wand and Indian club exercises.

The first of the program, which came immediately after all the marchers had arrived at the common, was the salute to the flag, with old glory being run up to the peak of the staff while bands played "The Star Spangled Banner" and boys and girls in battalion formation stood at attention and salute.

At elimination drills held last week three companies of the regiment, Co's D, F and B were selected to compete for the pennants and they appeared on the parade ground individually and were put through a series of maneuvers by their respective captains before the searching eyes of the judges.

Co. D, Capt. Merrill Calkins, was first on and after maneuvering for 10 minutes were rated and dismissed.

Sophomore Girls Drill Well

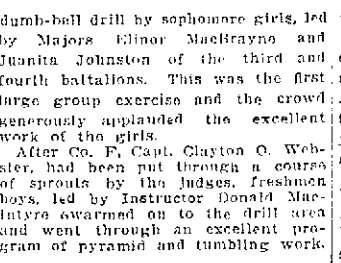

Next came a combination wand and dumb-bell drill by sophomore girls, led by Majors Elmer MacBryne and Juanita Johnston of the third and fourth battalions. This was the first large group exercise and the crowd generously applauded the excellent work of the girls.

After Co. F, Capt. Clayton O. Webster, had been put through a course of sprouts by the judges, freshmen boys, led by Instructor Donald MacBryne, swarmed on to the drill area and went through an excellent program of pyramid and tumbling work.

watched the group carefully for six or seven minutes before sending the eight of the boys and sending the remaining ten on for another session. After another five-minute drill period the detachment was dismissed and the judges retired to decide on the winners.

They had only numbers to go by the names of the competitors being unknown to them.

The gold prize winner, Private Henry Cluff of Co. B, drilled like a well-oiled machine, making nary a slip and showing perfect control of his rifle at all times. The second and third place winners also were fairly shag behind, but the judges saw difference enough to warrant their selection.

BOY AND GIRL OFFICERS IN FLAG MARCH

Solo Dance by Miss Russell

Pretty indeed was the dance by the freshmen girls, which had as added feature a solo Highland Fling by Miss Greta Russell, wearing approved Scottish costume. Miss Russell has not been in this country more than a year, but is a prominent member of the freshmen class at the school and an exceptionally fine dancer. The girls saw four years of service with the Highlanders during the World War and Miss Russell was taught dancing by Scots in the land of the heather.

Freshmen boys, led by Arthur T. Lynch, assistant physical instructor, put on a splendid show of drill and the book-breaking but beautiful Butler manual was exhibited by the entire boys' regiment, with Co. F, taking premier honors.

The Indian club drill by junior girls, led by Majors Sara G. Olsen and Margaret B. Olsen, was one of the best centered movements of the day. The girls are older and more advanced in physical training and went through the difficult stunts with surprising ease and cleverness. This evening the club without any apparent effort and did not pick any soft maneuvers either.

The final event on the program was the regimental dress parade, with the three battalions strung out across the parade ground facing the bleachers, reviewing officers, members of the city government and guests. At its close the commoners of Lowell, in honor of the city and the company and individual prizes were presented by Mayor John J. Donovan.

Throughout the afternoon the high school regiment band did remain service and firmly established itself as a splendid musical organization. It has been coached this year by John J. Giblin and he has attained excellent results. The band, Joseph M. Shamas was bandmaster.

Credit Due Instructors

All of the events for the girls were supervised by Miss Frances R. H. Leagat and Miss G. Myrtle Rooney, who had their pictures taken continuously and were the recipients of beautiful bouquets of flowers.

Members of the high school teaching staff, including Miss Leagat, Miss Rooney, Miss J. Conway, faculty director of athletics, supervising things generally. The boys' regiment was supervised by Major Collyer L. Kirtland, military instructor, with the freshmen boys performing under the supervision of Donald R. MacBryne and his assistant, Arthur T. Lynch.

Members of the school committee and other city officials occupied chairs on the bandstand and closely followed the program from beginning to end.

Refreshments were not forgotten and after afternoon members of the staff, lunch from staff, headed by Miss Helen G. Driscoll, served lemonade and sandwiches.

BODY OF LOWELL MAN TAKEN FROM RIVER

The body of Joseph F. Corcoran, a well known resident of Lowell, who has been missing since April 4, was taken from the Merrimack river at the foot of the North Bridge, as a result of the search made by the Corcoran family up to the time of his disappearance. A little over a year ago he received an injury which necessitated the amputation of one of his legs. This worried him considerably and he was thought at the time of his disappearance that this was the cause.

Two sisters, Mary A. and Katherine L. Corcoran of Lowell, and one brother, Patrick Corcoran in California, survive him. He was a member of the Lowell Training Pressmen's union, (Court No. 100), and was a member of the Lowell Acacia of Eagles. He was an attendant of the Immaculate Conception church.

British Protest
WASHINGTON, May 26.—In formal representations to the state department on the ships' honor question, the British government is understood to have taken the position that American port authorities have no jurisdiction over the international law of the sea with the exception of the American waters by foreign vessels as a part of their regular supplies. A formal communication on the subject was transmitted to Secretary Hughes yesterday by Sir Auckland Geddes, the British ambassador.

The British position is understood to be based on the construction that the jurisdiction of American officials over foreign ships engaged in international trade into the United States in no way extends to ships' stores or ration.

Disabled War Veterans

Continued
D.A.V., Mayor Edward F. Quinn of Cambridge and Mayor Peter F. Sullivan of Worcester, Hon. John Jacob Rogers, Capt. Joseph A. Molloy, commander of Lowell Post 57 of the American Legion, and other prominent speakers will be heard at the banquet. A well balanced program of entertainment has also been arranged for this evening event of the convention, said by the state department officers to be the most successful in the short history of the D.A.V. organization.

William Barrett of Lowell and Junior Vice Commander Harold Kelly will represent the 100 per cent D.A.V. chapter of the Rutland government hospital at the banquet tonight. Lawrence J. Finn, assistant of the Boston chapter of D.A.V., accompanied by Paul Lannan and Willie Kause of Lowell attended the installation of the chapter and officers at the hospital yesterday. Adjutant Finn was detailed to represent the Massachusetts state department at the convention. The Rutland chapter is the youngest in the state department organization.

Routine, business and the appointment of various committees occupied the attention of the delegates at the Saturday morning business session. Future policies of the organization and plans to strengthen and enlarge its scope of activities were touched upon by speakers. State Commander Gallagher of the American Legion addressed the session at the afternoon meeting, which reconvened in Liberty hall for the closing business session of the convention. Dr. L. C. Curt of New Bedford and J. Edward Murray of Resolute, present liaison officer of the veterans, are being the logical candidates for commander at the gatherings held last evening, following the supper.

Page's and the Keith entertainment. Dr. Hurt was one of the organizers of the American Legion at St. Louis. He has the support of many of the delegates outside of the Boston area. Murray is being backed by Boston and surrounding chapters.

Most men are born leaders, and they appear to be the long candidates in the field as head of the Disabled Veterans. Commander Charles Costello of Springfield has declined to be considered for re-election. Edward H. Sullivan of Lowell, state treasurer, and Joseph J. Lyons of Lowell, secretary, are in charge of the convention, has announced his intention of running for office. Sullivan is one of the most active members attending the convention. It is due to his untiring energy and co-operation with the committee that the convention has been a success.

The election of officers was scheduled to take place at the close of the afternoon business meeting. The banquet will start promptly at 7:30 in Liberty hall.

The banquet will bring to a close the first gathering of Disabled Veterans of the World war, one of the most active of service men's organizations in America. The organization formed three years ago has developed in membership and influence, that has resulted in getting better training and consideration for the problems of war veterans during the World War.

Discretion in rank will be disregarded at the banquet tonight. Buck private will rub elbows and converse with generals, majors and men prominent in national affairs. Preparations have been completed to make this one of the best military functions held in Lowell for many years. It is fitting and proper that the men, wounded in the service of our country should hold their convention and banquet in the Memorial Auditorium, one of the finest in the country and dedicated to the veterans of all wars.

Yesterday Afternoon's Session
Introduction of resolutions and the report of progress by officers of the veterans' organization, marked the close of the opening day of the convention. Continued to Page Eight

MOLDERS ARE STILL OUT ON STRIKE

If the strike of the molders of the Saco-Lowell and Kilton foundries is continued much longer it will not only affect the local plant of the company, but also those at Saco and Biddeford, Me., and New York Harbor. This is a statement made to The Sun this morning by officials of the International Molders' union of North America, who are in charge of the strike. These men are basing their statement on the fact that the molders of the Biddeford foundry of the company have been out on strike since last November, and that most of the foundry work of the company was being done in this city.

The Saco-Lowell has but one foundry in operation now, and that is at Newington Upper Falls, and it is said the plant is not sufficiently large to produce enough iron to keep all plants of the company in operation, and then again there is a possibility of the strike spreading to that shop. It is claimed that the two local foundries are badly handicapped as the men are unable to fill the molders' places. There are no skilled molders available in New England, and the workers feel that the strike will be of short duration.

The strikers held a brief meeting in Trades Union hall this morning and at 1 o'clock they were paid off at the Jackson street office of the Saco-Lowell and Kilton foundry. The men received all that was coming to them in the line of wages. There was no demonstration of any kind at the mill and as soon as the men were paid off they left the premises and returned to the hall, where another meeting was held later, the principal speaker being General Organizer Pendergast.

"LIGHTNIN'" NEXT WEEK AT THE OPERA HOUSE

The long heralded production "Lightnin'" the famous comedy hit which has created such a furore in New York, Chicago and Boston, will be presented at the Opera House, this city, during the week ending Monday and Tuesday evenings, May 28 and 29. This is important to Lowell theatregoers, as this was one of the first cities to be chosen for a presentation of "Lightnin'" after its sensational run at the Hollis theatre, Boston.

In the five years since this play was first produced at the Gaiety theatre, New York, it has broken every long run record not only in that city but also in Chicago and during the past seven months at the Hollis theatre, has outlived every other play that had ever appeared at that famous playhouse. The cast that John Golden will send here is headed by Percy Pollock as Lightnin' Bill Jones, and includes the same well-known players who have been continuously identified with this sensational hit during its three years in New York and two years in Chicago, including Jane Barker, Jason Richards, Paul Skatone, Thomas MacLarnie, Jessie Prince, Percy Winter, Sam Reed, Grace Perkins, George Thompson, May Duvree, E. J. Blunke, and James C. Lane.

No comedy that has ever been produced in America has achieved the success of this famous classic of tears and laughter. It has broken records everywhere for it is a play of the people and for the people. The characters in it are those that you see in everyday life. Lightnin' Bill Jones, as played by Percy Pollock, is a common figure in the world. An old Civil war veteran, a braggart who finds pleasure in telling lies, but who would fight if you called him a liar, a man of an impressionable third, lazy and just good enough to do odd jobs around the house, but one that has a heart warm and true, one that is always on the lookout to do another human being a good turn.

"Lightnin'" is the work of Winchell Smith and Frank Beach and has its scenes laid in a little hotel situated on the border line of California and Nevada. While the play is a happy blend of laughter and tears, its tremendous dramatic power centered around Lightnin' Bill Jones. Very quaint and lovable, he can talk fluently on any subject and has done anything that you might happen to suggest. To tell you the story of the play would only spoil a couple of hundred of the thousands of laughs that are packed into the play.

Discreet rumors that the home has been sold out. There are some very fine seats left for the performance on both days and those who go to the box office immediately can secure very fine seats for this play. Take advantage of the opportunity of seeing this wonderful play, as it will not be shown in this city again.

AMUSEMENT NOTES THIS STRAND

"Omar, the Tentmaker," Will Head an Excellent Program First Three Days of the Week

The offering by The Strand management for the first three days of the coming week, starting with matinees on Monday will be headed by the big First National production, "Omar, the Tentmaker," with Guy Bates Post in the title role, and Virginia Brown Faire in "The Flaming Hour," will be the second feature, and the other contributions will include a good comedy, and the Weekly issue, and "The Footlight Ranger," to say nothing of the musical numbers. For the last three days of the week, starting with the Thursday matinee, Charles Ray in "The Footlight Ranger" will be featured. There is a special Sunday program arranged, with five all-star vaudeville acts and an entire change of features.

"Omar, the Tentmaker," has been hailed as the screen's most colorful offering. Guy Bates Post is at his best, and Richard Walton Tully, the producer, has given it his best efforts. The intimate life of a Persian harem is depicted in vivid manner in this offering. A thread of the interesting story leads into the harem of the Shah of Persia, where dozens of beautiful girls are held prisoners until such time as they lose their beauty and fall from grace. Of old the Persian shahs were the most despotic of despots of all rulers, and they were able to commandeer any maiden they desired for their harem. In "Omar the Tentmaker," Shiraz, the beloved of Omar Kasayam, is "drafted" in such a manner, but the girl proved obstinate and is thrown into a dungeon as a slave and goes through tortuous adventures before she is reunited with her lover. Virginia Brown Faire plays the role of the star, Guy Bates Post. Despite her extreme youth, she was selected for the difficult role, and the selection proved the wisdom of the producer. The character of the young woman, as well as the peculiar type she portrays, is reflected by her in her interpretation of the young woman lover. The other members of the cast that assist are all capable and pleasing.

For those wives and husbands who fancy that occasional displays of temper and bad nature mean a picture for them to see in "The Flaming Hour," with Frank Mayo starring. It was written by Lillian Chester, and her husband, George Handley, who helped in rounding into form and finish. We must not tell you what the story is, except to suggest that people who are forever looking on the bright side of life, as a matter of fact, find obstacles that are thrown in their way, should see it and benefit.

Charles Ray is a newspaper editor and owner in his latest picture offering, "Smudge." It will appear Thursday, Friday and Saturday on The Strand screen, and if you are partial to Charlie and his creations of the film, you must not miss this one. He plays the part of Stephen Stanton, who inherits a small newspaper in a small town, and believes at the start that the place will never provide sufficient news to fill the small columns of his paper. He discovers, however, that big things sometimes develop in small communities, and when he starts to investigate he runs into a fund of adventure. The story is a perfect blend of humor, drama, and comes from the pen of Robert Wagner, the famous Saturday Evening Post writer.

Charles (Buck) Jones in "The Footlight Ranger" will give variety to the week-end bill. The picture story has all of the pleasing elements found in high-class picture entertainment with Jones at his best. The remainder of the offering will include a good comedy, a Weekly and some excellent musical numbers. Thus there is The Strand comfort. It's always cool, comfortable and genuinely enjoyable at The Strand.

SUNDAY AT THE STRAND
"The Son of the Desert," a photograph of rare value and entertaining power will be shown for the first time locally at the Strand on Sunday. This special creation of the screen has won unquestioned praise in all of the theatrical centers and will unquestionably win favor with local patrons. Besides the offering there will be the usual five acts of select vaudeville. This feature, together with Strand comfort will make the bill one of the best of the season. Come early and avoid the crush.

RIALTO THEATRE
"Over the Hill" Will be the Attraction of the Rialto Monday and Tuesday—Wonderful Production.

The wonderful screen production of the age, "Over the Hill," is coming to the Rialto theatre on Monday and Tuesday of next week and those who missed a chance of seeing Mary Carr's wonderful acting when the picture was shown in Lowell before, will now have an opportunity of doing so.

The picture is without doubt one of the most appealing ever produced on the screen. It is a story which strikes home to the heart of every man, woman and child who sees it for it forces home a point on which we are all bound to be a little careless. Nearly everybody remembers the famous song of the same name and as will be depicted on a screen with a story that is once both appealing and sad. Mary Carr rises to the height of her reputation in the production and that is not saying too much.

For Wednesday and Thursday the Rialto has a stirring production entitled "The Love Madness." It is another feature on the same program, and there is a comedy and the Picture News to furnish fun and interest.

The program for Sunday has George Arliss in an exceedingly strong production, also a comedy, "Crowning His Own," and a thriller entitled "Across the Continent."

Paul Decker several years ago came to the vaudeville stage from legitimate productions. His production of "The World's Greatest Play" is a masterpiece.

newness to the program. He is an entirely different kind of Ford. He says he wants the public to hear what he has on his mind. There is little doubt but that the Lowell public will hear him. He makes a real human, and at the same time, very humorous appeal. Myrtle Fiske and George Lloyd have contributed materially to the amount of popular music which has been heard in recent months. Mr. Lloyd is a composer of reputation, and Miss Fiske is a splendid singer.

MERRIMACK SQUARE THEATRE
Thomas Meighan in "The Ne'er-Do-Well," Adapted From Rex Beach's Novel, and Buster Keaton Features

Powerful, dramatic and absorbing Thomas Meighan's new Paramount picture, "The Ne'er-Do-Well," a dramatization of Rex Beach's celebrated novel, will open a four days engagement at the Merrimack Square theatre tomorrow. This is in an attraction of extraordinary importance to all admirers of the great star. Not only is the photoplay a cinema triumph, but it presents Mr. Meighan in one of the strongest roles in which that star has been seen since his first sensational success in "The Miracle Man." It is a picture production that every screen fan in the country will enjoy.

Kirk Anthony, played by Thomas Meighan, is the ne'er-do-well son of a wealthy man. As the result of a prank he finds himself on board a steamship bound for Panama without a cent in his pockets. He arrives, and the fun begins.

Mayor John J. Donovan will deliver the address. Following the singing of "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" by the choir and audience, Frank Dodge, past commander of the S.W.V., will deliver a Memorial day message from General D. S. Grant and Rev. Percy E. Thomas will then deliver the oration of the day.

"America," sung by the choir and the audience, and benediction pronounced by Rev. J. P. Kennedy, pastor of the Highland Union Methodist church, will close the service.

Since Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound This Woman Feels So Well

Keeseville, N. Y.—"I cannot praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound too highly for the good it has done me. I was so much troubled with female weakness I could hardly do any work. Heavy your advertisement in the paper, and read it to my husband. He said, 'You had better try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound,' so I bought six bottles, and by taking it I am not troubled as I was. I am gaining strength and getting fleshy. My female troubles have vanished and I have never felt so well. The Liver Pills are the best I ever took. If you think my letter will encourage other sufferers you have my permission to use it as an advertisement."—Mrs. SARAH BLAISE, Box 177, Keeseville, N. Y.

If you, as a housewife, are troubled with backache, irregularities, are easily tired out and irritable, or have other disagreeable ailments caused by some weakness, give Lydia E. TO COMBAT EXCESSIVE RAILROAD VALUATIONS

CHICAGO, May 26.—(By the Associated Press) Its ranks formed into the first national conference on railroad valuation to combat what it charges are excessive railroad valuations contemplated by the Interstate Commerce commission, a group of national progressive legislative and administrative officials today will hear further addresses and discuss definite plans for future activities.

Several national figures, including W. J. Bryan, will address the conference and it is considered probable that an attempt will be made to place officially before the gathering a statement protesting against the meeting which was presented yesterday by a number of Chicago traffic and commercial boards, but rejected because Senator Robert M. La Follette, a leader in the conference, said the conference had not then gone into session.

Rev. Percy J. Thomas, pastor of the First Congregational church, will be the orator of the day. Bugler T. J. McCarthy will open the services promptly at three o'clock with the sounding of "Assembly." The above organizations in some instances will be augmented by veteran organizations of other countries and semi-military associations. The Lowell Command of the British Great War Veterans of America will march with the American Legion. The organizations are planning to meet at their respective halls at 2.30, in order to have ample time to march to the services. The program of the service is as follows:

NERVOUS HEADACHE AND DIZZY SPELLS

Malnutrition of the Nerves Was Corrected in This Case by Tonic Treatment

Some forms of nervous headache cannot be entirely overcome but there are few cases in which they cannot be relieved and made more infrequent. When headache and dizziness are accompanied by symptoms of general debility it is always advisable to take tonic treatment. As the general health improves it is often found that the nervous symptoms disappear.

This was the case with Mrs. Albert Bartol of No. 3875 Washington street, Roslindale, Mass. She had been a nervous sufferer since girlhood but some time ago her suffering became more acute. She says:

"I suffered from blinding headaches when everything would go black and spin around. I became so dizzy that I had to take hold of something to keep me from falling. This condition lasted for a couple of hours. I was always tired and did not have any ambition. I had a great craving for food but could not enjoy eating. There was a pain across my back and I felt generally run down."

"My mother had used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and she urged me to try them. Within a short time after I began to take the pills there was a decided improvement in my condition. My strength returned, slowly at first, but now I feel like a different person. I eat heartily and my food gives me strength. My nerves are stronger and the headaches are much less severe and they very seldom appear now. After what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have done for me I do not hesitate to recommend them to everyone in need of a tonic."

Your own druggist sells Dr. Williams' Pink Pills or they will be sent by mail, hospital, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box, by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y. Write for free booklet on nervous disorders.—Adv.

Beauty Tips and Advice As to Care of the Face by Mme. Helene Rubinstein

AT LAST A "SEEING PHONE"

The weakness of this "seeing phone" is that the user sees herself and not the party at other end of the line. It's the latest fad in San Francisco society. Miss Thama Speed is shown using a combination portable vanity case and telephone. Miss Speed says the new invention saves time, as one may now "make up" while making a date.

Beauty Expert Says You Can Protect Skin by Proper Use of Powder—Rubinstein Tells How To Do It

BY MME. HELENE RUBINSTEIN
International Beauty Expert
(Copyright 1923 N.E.A. Service, Inc.)

Between the severe spring weather America has just endured and the brilliant summer sun which will soon be playing havoc with our skins, one may look for the usual crop of wrinkles, lines, shriveled and dried up skins.

One cannot control the weather, but at least one can protect the skin by the use of scientifically shielding powder base.

From the artistic point of view, no finishing touch can succeed without a foundation. The skin is full of pores which are like so many hungry mouths that swallow whatever is brought in direct contact with them.

Rouge and powder no matter how excellent their quality lose their effect by being drawn more and more deeply into the tissues instead of remaining on the surface. But, not something between the cosmetic and the skin and there is no reason why your powder should not last the whole afternoon and evening without your having to add the least mite.

Whenever you see a woman frequently powdering her nose or putting fresh rouge on her cheeks, you may be sure that either she hasn't used a foundation at all or that she has made a poor choice.

French women invariably use a foundation on their lips.

And now comes the question of the character of the foundation. If the skin is normal, your choice may be guided by preference so far as the question of whether it shall be a lotion or cream. But if the skin is dry, be sure to use something containing soothing oils.

In the evening a vanishing cream is sometimes preferred to a base of any other kind, but for daytime I do not think it is as satisfactory as a balm.

When it happens to be windy or if the sun is shining brilliantly far better results are obtained by using a scientific protective, either in the form of a non-disappearing cream or a lotion.

There are some skins, however, that do not easily discolor and if these happen to be of the oily type a lovely foundation can be made with liquid powder.

dry powder and rouge should be put on before the liquid dries. This forms the pores and is also becoming as it a very thin film that is good to protect corrects the tendency to shine.

THRIFT

An empty garbage pail is the certain indication of two things: that one knows how to buy and how to use what one has bought. Thrift does not put slices of bread, halves of stale loaves, bits of cheese, vegetables, bones and scraps of meat into the garbage pail.

ENAMELED FURNITURE

Enamelled furniture should be wiped off with a soft cloth, wrung out of lukewarm soapsuds using a pure soap—and dried with another soft cloth.

THE EGGBEATER

Never let the eggbeater soak, as that draws the oil from the gears. It should be washed at once and set to dry.

RED GEORGETTE

Coral red georgette, combined with coral lace and gold tissue ribbon, makes a very charming negligee.

BAKED POTATOES

Baking potatoes uses up considerable gas. You can lessen the time by boiling the potatoes for 15 or 20 minutes and finishing them in a hot oven.

APRICOT TAFFETA

A hat of apricot taffeta has an all-over applique of black velvet cut out in a cherry and vine design.

TAPESTRY BAGS

Tapestry is the only cloth in vogue for bags in Paris today. The bags generally match the costume in tone or background, however.

SHORTER SKIRTS

The shorter skirt length, it is said, will characterize all of the modes for fall.

HEADS AGAIN

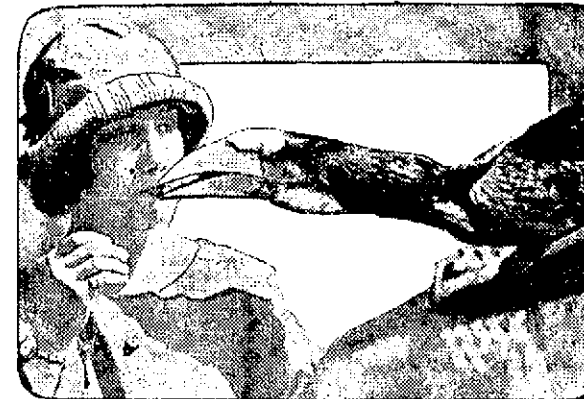

The in-fad frock is coming back to favor for evening wear. One of white satin or crepe de chine, beaded with crystal or pearl are liked.

LONG COATS

Long coats of silk and satin are extensively shown, lined with chiffon or crepe and collared with the lightest and softest of summer furs.

WHITE MILLINERY

Draped turbans of white tulle, satin, velvet or duvelyn are very smart for wear with the all white costume, or the white fur coat.

LIKE PLAYING WITH DYNAMITE

This hornbill has strength enough in its beak to pierce a human skull, but here he is gently plucking a grape from the lips of a fair visitor to the London zoo.

STYLES IN PEARLS

It is the fad, now to wear two strings of pearl beads, one that fits closely about the throat and another which may reach to the waistline. Usually the small string has the larger beads.

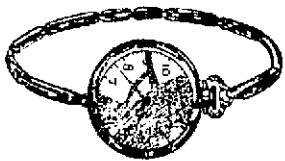

MID-SUMMER STYLES

Summer frocks in organdie and taffeta show peonies, trimmings and panels to accentuate the straight line. Bonfanti organdie frocks are worn over straight-line slips of satin or silver cloth.

VELVET AND ORGANDIE IN BEAUTIFUL DESIGN

ONE COMBINATION THAT STAYS

One of the startling and beautiful designs of the season was brought out by a French house a short time ago. It shows black velvet applied to white organdie.

STEAM LEFT-OVER MEATS

If you steam the left-over chops or steak, they will be almost as good as when first cooked and will not be as dry as when they are baked or broiled.

KEEP LID ON

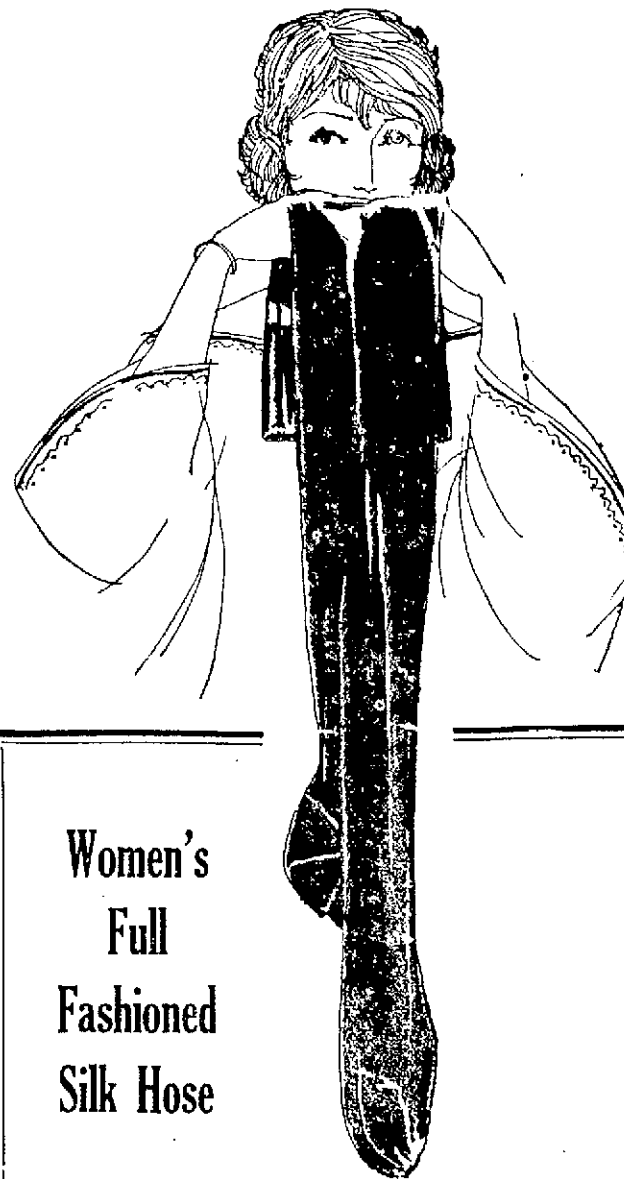

Your dumplings or steamed puddings are quite apt to fall if you lift the lid of the steamer while they are cooking.

COMBINATION CONSERVE

Rhubarb and strawberries cooked together make an excellent conserve. When strawberries are not first-class they may be made delicious in this way.

ORANGE-RHUBARB MARMALADE

By BERTHA E. SHAWLEIGH

Remove the skin from eight oranges and boil it in a small amount of water until tender. Then scrape out all the white part and cut the yellow part into very small pieces.

To the pulp of the oranges add five pounds of rhubarb which has been cut into inch pieces. Boil one-half hour. Add four pounds of sugar and boil slowly for two hours. Add the orange peel and turn the marmalade into glasses.

This is a very good marmalade and offers another way of using rhubarb while it is young and tender.

WRAPPED FOODS

It is unhygienic to buy cakes, pies, crackers and other foods which are to be eaten immediately in wrapped packages or in cellophane. However, they have to be cooked before eating and hence should be purchased in bulk as they are cheaper that way.

SAVING BUTTER

The butter cut in small blocks or made in shapes and served on the bread and butter plates is to be avoided. On the plate it is perfectly clean, even if left, because the knife is used only for that.

REMOVING INK

Fresh ink stains may be removed by sucking in milk. Old ink stains that have dried may be removed by washing in hot lard. Wash as one would with water, using again and again, finally washing out the lard in soapy water.

LINGERIE BLOUSES

Lingerie waists are very popular this season and are shown in beautiful styles. Collars of batiste bands fastened together in lace designs sometimes take the place of the conventional collar of lace or the one that is lace trimmed.

USEFUL ARTICLE

The pink crepe or satin underslip with the accordion pleated skirt is a useful addition to any wardrobe. When the summer is over it still has possibilities as a negligee foundation when combined with a jacket of lace or georgette.

CORDEUR JACKET

Jackets of white corduroy with brilliant and fantastic figures are a novelty to wear with the white silk or cotton skirt.

THE WORLD COURT

Senator Borah is the chief opponent of the proposition that the United States shall join the international court. In a debate on the merits of the question before the Women's Republican club of Massachusetts on Thursday, in Boston, the senator stated his objections to the court. He said it is not a court of justice but merely an arbitration tribunal. Even so, if it settles by arbitration the issues on which nations split and go to war it will serve a most useful purpose. The senator objects to it because it has not the power to command its members, viz., it has not power enough. He opposed the League of Nations because of having too much power. If an international body is organized for any purpose whatsoever, its powers and prerogatives must be clearly laid down, and we believe the functions of this world court are well understood. Senator Borah would have a world court with power over all the nations to be exercised as our supreme court uses its power of deciding issues for all the states with unquestioned finality. It would require an international army to enforce the decisions of such a court, but that is not available, the world court deals only with cases submitted to it by the parties to the controversy. Already fourteen nations have accepted the court as compulsory, while the others regard it as voluntary, so that in the international aspect, it takes on the status of our supreme court as regards the various states, so far as the nations are individually willing to have it so. As for the United States, the senate would decide what issues affecting this nation would be submitted to the arbitration or adjudication of the world court.

Congressman Burton who voices President Harding's view of the court, claims that its compulsory powers will be enlarged as soon as its efficacy in preventing war becomes apparent to the world. Thus eventually it would come to meet the ideal of Senator Borah in exercising compulsory powers over the nations for the prevention of war. As for the United States, while we pretend to be opposed to wars and in favor of peace among the nations, unless we co-operate with other nations in their efforts to maintain universal peace, the sincerity of our declaration in this respect will be doubted.

There is one menace that may eventually unite all civilized nations for their common defense and the prevention of a world war that would wipe out the last remnants of civilization in Europe. That menace comes from Russia with the red hand of the Communists and the dangerous propaganda that is being rapidly spread all over the world. If the world court serves to fortify the nations by union for their own safety, then it will serve a good purpose. It will require the united action of all the nations of Europe to hold the Soviets in Russia and if the court will assist in that desirable end, as it certainly must, then it is an institution that should be favored, fostered and protected. In such a work—peace and the restraint of communism, this court, if conducted on the principles outlined, may prove to be the foremost safeguard of civilization and the most effective preventive of war. Whether it will become such will depend upon the use made of it by the nations and particularly upon whether the United States will be one of its supporting nations.

STOP FATAL CARELESSNESS

For a city of our size we are piling up a very alarming list of fatalities as a result of automobile accidents. Already we have had five deaths from such accidents in this city since the first of the year. Several of these have been children who ran in front of the automobiles in such a way that it was impossible to avoid running over them or knocking them down. It seems that parents are sadly neglectful in teaching their children not to go out on the sidewalk on any street where automobiles are frequently passing. If the curbstone is made the dead line, except at a regular crossing, then most of these fatalities would be averted. But children without any averted or warning are allowed to go ahead on the street and they thoughtlessly cross the street or run into the path of automobiles while playing the ball or rolling a hoop and the inevitable result follows. The driver, in such cases, is arrested and charged with manslaughter, but this is a mere legal formality that as a rule results only in the acquittal of the accused driver.

WHY COAL IS HIGH

An official of the International Union of United Mine Workers of America in an address before the Yonkers board of trade said that there are 4000 too many coal mines in this country and 200,000 too many miners, and he charges that the coal operators are responsible for this condition. It is doubtless a fact that the excessive number of mines adds to the cost of production for the reason that the cost of maintaining 4000 needless mines must be paid out of the receipts for the amount of coal produced, and sold, and from this also must be provided a living for the 200,000 surplus miners employed in the industry. It would seem that some directing agency is necessary to solve the mine difficulties and to restore competition, where at present it seems to be outlawed. Evidently the fault does not lie with the United Mine Workers nor with the men employed in mining coal. They are justified in accepting employment wherever they can find it and as a result of the excessive number of mines, the miners do not get steady work and they complain also that their wages are not sufficient to support them in the ordinary comforts of life. It would seem that if competition were freely allowed, it would eliminate the unnecessary mines for the reason that no coal operator would maintain a mine that is not doing a profitable business. The situation is evidently dictated by the coal operators and the railroads with which they are allied.

BETTER RAILROAD SERVICE

Railroad mergers and consolidations of various kinds have been discussed at great length before the Interstate Commerce commission and the act passed for changes in New England has been so persistent that it is quite probable that something in this line will be done. President Huls of Boston & Maine states that his road is not bankrupt nor broken down. He holds it is giving good service, but it lacks the funds for expansion. It is probable that the New England roads will be united in a regional system and that this will be joined with some transcontinental line. President Huls of the Boston and Maine would like to unite with the Canadian Pacific, but the I. C. C. has no jurisdiction to dictate the terms of a merger with that system.

TO GIVE IMPROVED SERVICE AT REASONABLE RATES

The handicap of differentials may be overcome in making the proposed changes, as New England should not be continuously held in this bondage to the south. New England must assert itself, and it cannot do so successfully until the proposed mergers become effective.

DIPHTHERIA DISAPPEARING

The diphtheria death rate has been cut in half in the last three years by using the Schick Test, announces Dr. Hermann M. Briggs, the New York commissioner of health.

MAGELLAN'S HELMET

H. D. Selton, army major, displays among his curios the brass helmet worn by Magellan, Portuguese navigator whose expedition was first to sail around the world. It is a heavy affair, richly carved, but most of its weight is soon worn away. It is a heavy affair, richly carved, but most of its weight is soon worn away.

LONGER LIFE

The average American now lives 55 years, or 15 years more than when the Civil war started, and by 1950 the span of life may be raised to 69 years. So predicts Dr. Haven Emerson of New York City.

BIG DEPOSITS

Twenty-nine of our large corporations had 1181 million dollars in cash and investment securities "salted away" at the beginning of the year, Wall Street Journal says.

SMALLER CROPS

Smaller crops than last year, but they'll be bigger than the 10-year average. That is the government forecast. It is the most important item in the news to millions of American farmers, especially since one of their main problems has been overproduction or something close to it.

STOCKS

Harvard University has 31 million dollars of general investments. About a fifth is in stocks, the rest in bonds and real estate mortgages.

NOTED CANOEISTS IN LOWELL

Says the old Sun: "About 25 members of the Eastern division of the American Canoe Association met at the annual spring meet at Tuxedo Island, by invitation of the Vesper Country club, on Saturday afternoon, May 23. The men remained in camp Saturday night and on Sunday had some practice on the river. At that time Paul Butler was one of the most distinguished canoeists in the United States."

SEARCHING FOR SPANISH FLEET

About this time 25 years ago, the country was still waiting for the battle between the American and the Spanish fleets. The American ships were cruising along the coast and looking all the harbors of Cuba and Porto Rico under close blockade and everywhere searching for the Spanish fleet. There were then no airplanes to fly over the Cuban harbors in search of the fleets which were supposed to be in hiding. Commodore Schley announced that he had reason to believe that the Spanish fleet was in Santiago harbor and so he went there. The prediction never returned to Spain. The prediction was verified, although not until July 4th was the Spanish fleet destroyed.

SOAP JELLY

Bits of soap which accumulate either in kitchen or in chambers may serve as a germ breeding nest to hold in little hot water. For the kitchen let the soap remain in a jelly which is very convenient for scrubbing or laundry.

Quarter Century Ago

Says the old Sun: "Old Glory was raised over Odd Fellows hall on Bridge street by Centralville lodge, I. O. O. F., last night. It was intended to hold the exercises in the open air but on account of the rain, the program was carried out in the hall. George H. Taylor presided and the speakers included Rev. Mr. Millington, Rev. E. Wilson, and Rev. George S. Johnson. The orchestra played the Star Spangled Banner on the folds of the flag were unfurled over the platform."

Orders For Memorial Day

On May 26, W. H. L. Hayes, chief marshal of the Memorial day parade, and W. W. Tuttle, chief of staff, issued general orders for the parade. The post commanders also issued orders for their respective organizations.

Troop F Offered Its Services

On May 27, Troop F Cavalry met at the town hall in Chelmsford and after conducting their regular drill, Captain Shaw announced that the services of the troop were tendered to the government and that the troop awaited general orders for the parade.

John L. MacVicar

From the old Sun: "Mr. John L. MacVicar, who has been connected with the Merrimack Mfg. company as general manager, left last night for New York to report on the U. S. Steamship Company, having received an appointment as assistant engineer. He was at one time first assistant engineer of the American liner St. Louis."

Presented Urn For Soldiers' Lot

The old Sun has a large picture of a stone urn presented by the James A. Garfield Women's Relief Corps to the trustees of soldiers' lot in the Lowell cemetery. It was dedicated on May 28, being the Saturday preceding Memorial day. Speaking of the event the old Sun said: "Members of Post 120, G.A.R., the Women's Relief Corps, Sons and Daughters of Veterans, members of the city government, were present at the exercises. The urn was filled with beautiful flowers, the inscription on the base read as follows: 'Erected by James A. Garfield Women's Relief Corps, 33, May 28, 1898. A tribute of gratitude to the Union soldiers and sailors who served in the Civil war, 1861-1865. O, ye who rest in these hallowed graves, be remembered because unknown. We cherish the memory of your deeds. Angels have heard your story. And God knows all your names.' 'Beneath the crossed guns on one side of the base is the inscription, 'To the unknown dead.'"

Before Prohibition

A senator who had been imbibing slightly passed before a door attended by a steady old doorkeeper. "George," said the statesman, "you must have been here for a long time. I have been here for 20 years myself and you were a fixture when I first came to the senate. Thank you, senator. I have kept this door for 32 years." "A remarkable record," declared the senator. "George, you have kept that door as well as Horatius kept the bridge."

Names Her Substitute

The Rev. Mr. Tuttle was new in Hartberg and was making his first call upon the Curtis family. Mrs. Curtis did not think she was suitably dressed to receive the new minister, so she sent little Gladys to the door to admit him and to entertain him until she might dress. The minister and Gladys sat along (armchairs) and in five minutes were intimately acquainted. "You're a fine little girl," the preacher told Gladys. Then, reaching out and taking her hand, "would you give me a kiss?" Gladys, however, was a bit doubtful on this proposition. She bashfully pulled away and ran to her mother. "Mamma! Mamma!" she exclaimed. "The new preacher wants to kiss me!" "Why, that's all right," mother assured him. "I would give him a kiss if I were you." Thus instructed from mother, Gladys went back into the other room. "Well, are you going to give me that kiss now?" the preacher asked. "Well, no, I can't kiss you," Gladys answered. "But mamma says she will."—Kansas City Star.

A Meticulous Memory

"I remember, I remember," said Alonzo Hiram Lee. "The house where I was born among the oaks and timothy. The shingle roof that always leaked. The crazy sleep all mottled green and gray with weather stains. The broken bucket in the well—it weighed at least a ton. The heat and cold in which I toiled, alas! from sun to sun. The cornucopia on my bed that tortured me all night. The roosters that commenced to crow long hours before the light. There wasn't any radio or any phonograph. Or colored Sunday supplements to make a fellow laugh. We didn't have a telephone and so we had to bring our pines and tea and calico and every little thing. We didn't have a handy car in which to swiftly go. But I did hit old Dobbin up and down—but he was slow. We had no rural mail, nor did we have a parcel post. And schooling was a luxury that few of us could boast. I remember, I remember, the house where I was born. The carpet in the sitting room in holes and tatters worn. The garden laurel with broken branches and colonies of moths. The thick white china cups and plates and gray tablecloths. The meers that I had to eat of pork and beans and greens. The fact I had no second suit or mack in my jeans. The straight hard-bottomed kitchen chairs I ache all over yet. I remember, I remember, but I wish I could forget."

SEEN AND HEARD

"Love and let love" seems to be the spring motto.

Wouldn't it be funny if everybody believed everybody?

The world gets better. You seldom hear a ukulele now.

Nothing makes you see things in a different light like a full moon.

A Thought

The ways to enrich are many, and most of them foul. Parsimony is one of the best, and yet is not innocent; for it withholdeth man from works of liberality and charity.—Bacon.

Another Boy Fired

"Has nobody called during my two days' absence?" said the doctor to the office boy. "I left this aite here for callers to write their names on, and it is perfectly clean." "Oh, yes," said the boy. "Lots of people came and the aite got so full of names that this morning I had to rub them out to make room for more."

An Awful Fix

"You seem blue these days, old chap," remarked Percy. "Yes," agreed Alfred. "My girl says I don't love her." "O, well, they often say that," comforted Percy. "But why in your case?" "On see, I'm engaged to one of 'em," explained Alfred. "Well," said the other man stopped. "When I call they usually enter the parlor together. If I hesitate that's bad and if I kiss the wrong girl that's worse."

A Patient Waiter

He was a very patient and long-suffering young man, but when at last she arrived at the corner where they had arranged to meet he ventured a remonstrance. "Darling, you are late," he said mildly. "Only a few minutes," she protested in an injured tone. "I said I'd be here at 7 o'clock and it's 20 minutes past."

Time Is Cruel

An old Scotchwoman, much against her will, was induced to sit for her picture, the first she had taken since she was a girl in her teens. When the photographer handed to her she failed to recognize herself. She thought there must be some mistake. "Is this me?" she asked. "Yes, madam," said the photographer. "And it's a speaking likeness." The old lady looked at her counterpart presentment for a full minute in silence. "Awful," she said, resignedly. "It's a humblin' sight."

A Thought

The ways to enrich are many, and most of them foul. Parsimony is one of the best, and yet is not innocent; for it withholdeth man from works of liberality and charity.—Bacon.

Another Boy Fired

"Has nobody called during my two days' absence?" said the doctor to the office boy. "I left this aite here for callers to write their names on, and it is perfectly clean." "Oh, yes," said the boy. "Lots of people came and the aite got so full of names that this morning I had to rub them out to make room for more."

An Awful Fix

"You seem blue these days, old chap," remarked Percy. "Yes," agreed Alfred. "My girl says I don't love her." "O, well, they often say that," comforted Percy. "But why in your case?" "On see, I'm engaged to one of 'em," explained Alfred. "Well," said the other man stopped. "When I call they usually enter the parlor together. If I hesitate that's bad and if I kiss the wrong girl that's worse."

A Patient Waiter

He was a very patient and long-suffering young man, but when at last she arrived at the corner where they had arranged to meet he ventured a remonstrance. "Darling, you are late," he said mildly. "Only a few minutes," she protested in an injured tone. "I said I'd be here at 7 o'clock and it's 20 minutes past."

Time Is Cruel

An old Scotchwoman, much against her will, was induced to sit for her picture, the first she had taken since she was a girl in her teens. When the photographer handed to her she failed to recognize herself. She thought there must be some mistake. "Is this me?" she asked. "Yes, madam," said the photographer. "And it's a speaking likeness." The old lady looked at her counterpart presentment for a full minute in silence. "Awful," she said, resignedly. "It's a humblin' sight."

Before Prohibition

A senator who had been imbibing slightly passed before a door attended by a steady old doorkeeper. "George," said the statesman, "you must have been here for a long time. I have been here for 20 years myself and you were a fixture when I first came to the senate. Thank you, senator. I have kept this door for 32 years." "A remarkable record," declared the senator. "George, you have kept that door as well as Horatius kept the bridge."

Names Her Substitute

The Rev. Mr. Tuttle was new in Hartberg and was making his first call upon the Curtis family. Mrs. Curtis did not think she was suitably dressed to receive the new minister, so she sent little Gladys to the door to admit him and to entertain him until she might dress. The minister and Gladys sat along (armchairs) and in five minutes were intimately acquainted. "You're a fine little girl," the preacher told Gladys. Then, reaching out and taking her hand, "would you give me a kiss?" Gladys, however, was a bit doubtful on this proposition. She bashfully pulled away and ran to her mother. "Mamma! Mamma!" she exclaimed. "The new preacher wants to kiss me!" "Why, that's all right," mother assured him. "I would give him a kiss if I were you." Thus instructed from mother, Gladys went back into the other room. "Well, are you going to give me that kiss now?" the preacher asked. "Well, no, I can't kiss you," Gladys answered. "But mamma says she will."—Kansas City Star.

A Meticulous Memory

"I remember, I remember," said Alonzo Hiram Lee. "The house where I was born among the oaks and timothy. The shingle roof that always leaked. The crazy sleep all mottled green and gray with weather stains. The broken bucket in the well—it weighed at least a ton. The heat and cold in which I toiled, alas! from sun to sun. The cornucopia on my bed that tortured me all night. The roosters that commenced to crow long hours before the light. There wasn't any radio or any phonograph. Or colored Sunday supplements to make a fellow laugh. We didn't have a telephone and so we had to bring our pines and tea and calico and every little thing. We didn't have a handy car in which to swiftly go. But I did hit old Dobbin up and down—but he was slow. We had no rural mail, nor did we have a parcel post. And schooling was a luxury that few of us could boast. I remember, I remember, the house where I was born. The carpet in the sitting room in holes and tatters worn. The garden laurel with broken branches and colonies of moths. The thick white china cups and plates and gray tablecloths. The meers that I had to eat of pork and beans and greens. The fact I had no second suit or mack in my jeans. The straight hard-bottomed kitchen chairs I ache all over yet. I remember, I remember, but I wish I could forget."

Changing its lineup in the concluding stages of last night's Twilight League game on the South common and overcoming a one run handicap, the Y.M.C.I. pinned a 7 to 4 defeat on the K. of C. in one of the best-played and most interesting games of the present season.

The Institute boys started off with a bang in the first inning and pushed three runners over the fence. The "Caseys" took their turn at bat, and it looked like an easy win for the waters of the Y.M.C.I. uniform. The Knights came back strong, however, the second inning, and scored four runs, holding the advantage until the fatal seventh, when Willard, batting in place of Morris, slammed a hot single past second base and enabled two runners to cross the plate with the deciding run.

It was indeed a tough game for the Knights to lose. Although pitched for nine innings, they were not in good luck and might have left the rubber with a victory to his credit had not his opponents made a last minute spurt. Morris started on the mound for the winners and pitched splendid ball in every inning with the exception of the third when he eased up a bit and allowed the Knights to score three runs and take the lead. As had been customary in many previous games, the old strategy of placing a fast ball twirler in the box with the arrival of darkness, was again employed last night, when "Eddie" Cawley took the rubber in the sixth inning and held the Knights at his mercy with his deceptive speed ball.

Several new faces appeared on common playfield during the fray. Bickel, who was the last chapter member of the high school team, caught a brilliant game for the Knights while LaTour showed a lot of stuff in right for the Y.M.C.I. center for the Knights also made his debut as a Twilight leaguer and gave every indication of being a finished ball player.

Lynch inaugurated the festivities by crashing a single to right field and went to second base. Gath, who singled past third and short bringing Lynch home with the first run of the game. A single past third base, scored by Cawley and Gath, while Morris pretty well won the game for the "Eddie" over with the third marker.

The three big runs loomed big at this stage of the game, but a ball game later into the last chapter. To prove the truth of this assertion, the Knights retaliated with one run in the second stanza when Lemoine walked.

and starting with the crack of the bat went "around the horn" on Dillon's two-sacker to left center.

But the Y.M.C.I. was still leading by two runs and held this lead until the third in which inning the Knights went to the front with three big markers. After Dally had four died to O'Day, McMorris walked and registered on a two-baser by Sousa in going into second. "John Phillip" accidentally spiked Eddie Gath causing a temporary suspension of play. Gath resumed play apparently unimpaired. With the bases choked, Lemoine came through at the crucial moment with a lusty smash to deep left and three runners crossed the plate before he stopped at second. This ended the scoring for the "Caseys" who, inspired with their return to form, played a neat brand of ball in the succeeding innings.

In the sixth, the uncertainty of the game once more asserted itself, and Y.M.C.I. sent three new men into the box. A pitched ball stole second and scored the tying run on Cawley's double baser just inside the left field foul line. The hit was fair by inches but it came opportunely for the Institute crew. Willard's clip to left decided the game and the Knights had to content themselves with second money. The score:

BIG TRACK MEET
Silesia Mills Team of No. Chelmsford Will Make Its Debut Wednesday

Next Wednesday afternoon at three o'clock, the newly-organized Silesia Mills baseball team of North Chelmsford, composed of a formidable array of well-known ball tossers, will make its diamond debut against the Millstreams of Chelsea at Silezia park, formerly of Chelsea at Silezia park, historic in horse racing days when father was a boy.

At the Silesia Mills have been celebrities for many years, but with the formation of an energetic association, consisting of W. S. Pepper of Taunton, head of the Textile Corporation that operates the Silesia Mills, and J. E. Hogan, prominently connected with the mill, athletes are destined for a surprising revival in the scheduled game with the Chelmsford as the initial step in this direction.

Instances are few perhaps, where active mill officials take such manifest interest in sports as the Silesia named above. Messrs. Pepper, Gilmore and Hogan however, are old baseball stars themselves and know the game from every angle, and their experience should help materially in placing their organization on a high pedestal in the baseball world.

Old Wannanauet park has been reconditioned and suited to baseball so that the fans may look for some very fast ball during the coming months. According to present plans, many of the best known and fastest semi-professional organizations in the state will appear on the North Chelmsford playfield this season. Should the idea materialize the Silesia team will engage in a five game series with the famous Abbot Worston outfit of Grantham, reputed to be as strong as any baseball crew in New England.

Games will be played, as a rule, on Saturdays and Sundays, and on other dates which will not interfere with the local Twilight League schedule. Among the players already signed up to sport the uniform of the Silesia are "Eddie" Cawley, "Joe" Duffy, Walter Foye, Ray Reynolds Jim Brown, Lowell players whose baseball prowess needs no explanation. For the pitcher, however, Mr. Gilmore, who will manage the team, has secured the services of Greenhalgh, formerly of Rhode Island State college and one of the best pitchers ever produced in the realm of collegiate baseball. Negotiations are also under way to procure a twirler of the Boston Red Sox. In the outfield state will appear one-time the outstanding satellite of the Seton Hall college game, New Jersey, "Jack" will act as field captain of the new organization and should prove a capable general.

Lowell and Lawrence K. OF C. PLAY BALL

The Lowell Knights of Columbus baseball team entertained the Lawrence Knights on the South common this afternoon. Last Wednesday night the "Caseys" of that city held the Y.M.C.I. of Lowell to a scoreless loss. Manager "Joe" Duffy of the Lowell team, who is a former player of the "Caseys," held the Y.M.C.I. of Lowell to a scoreless loss. Jack Daw's Adventures. Chapter 8

Out into the open air went the flying horse, with Jack and Mighty hanging on as tight as they could. As soon as they were clear of the Cloud Palace Jack looked down and saw the old king bounding along from one cloud to another. Then his attention was attracted by a small black speck far away.

As the flying horse sped along this blackness came nearer and nearer until Jack discovered that it was a flock of geese, flying in a V shape. Mighty explained that that was the way geese always flew, with the leader of the flock at the head. Then the leader goose pulled away from the rest.

"I'll bet that big goose wants to race with us," shouted Jack. "Well," replied Mighty, "we'll show him that our flying horse can travel much faster than he can." And with that the race started. Faster and faster went the geese, and faster and faster went the flying horse. (Continued.)

PAYS HIGH TRIBUTE TO AMERICAN PRESS

COLUMBIA, Mo., May 26.—(By the Associated Press) The character of American newspapers, their standard of honor and their conception of responsibility to the public are notably high. Louis Wiley, business manager of the New York Times told students and visiting newspapermen here yesterday at the University of Missouri Journalism week.

"The publications which lead, those which exert the greatest influence, those most widely read, the most prosperous, are, as a rule the newspapers which live up to the highest standards of ethics," Mr. Wiley asserted. "Their administration is on the basis of the highest standards of honesty, not to subordinate principle to expediency; neither public service and to place before their readers that which will not deceive, corrupt, deceive, offend or excite malign influence on the community."

"In our civilization newspapers are indispensable," Mr. Wiley continued. "It would be difficult, if not impossible, to maintain present day international relations, business, transportation and social life without newspapers. They are the great channels of information."

More people are reading the newspapers than ever before, Mr. Wiley said. This he attributed to the development of modern labor and time-saving devices, the use of which gives the people more time for leisure, more information, and more interest in the reading of newspapers.

Whereas a petition has been presented to the Court to grant letters of administration on the estate of said deceased to Brian McGinnis, of Lowell, in the County of Middlesex, without giving a surety on his bond.

And said petitioner is hereby directed to give public notice thereof, by publishing this citation once in each week, for three successive weeks in The Lowell Sun, a newspaper published in Lowell, the last publication to be on one day, at least, before said Court.

Witness, George F. Lawton, Esquire, First Judge of said Court, this eighth day of May, in the year one thousand nine hundred and twenty-three.

P. M. ESTY, Register.

NEARING CENTURY MARK

Edmund Brickett of Dover Street Observes His 92nd Birthday

Nearing the century mark and still possessed of all his senses, is Edmund Brickett, of 55 Dover street, who is quietly observing his 92nd birthday at his home today, surrounded by friends whom he has watched grow up from their school days.

But sorrow and worry marks Mr. Brickett's face today, for his only daughter lies seriously ill at her home, 1302 Commonwealth avenue, Boston, and her life is despaired of by her physicians.

Mr. Brickett traces his ancestry back to the early days of the republic.

his father being born in 1737 in the little town of Newbury, Vt., and lived to the ripe old age of 86, dying in Newbury, Vt., one Feb. 10, 1852. His mother was born in Peacham, Vt., in 1809, and died in Danville, Vt., Aug. 10, 1874.

Mr. Brickett was born in Peacham, Vt., May 25, 1831, and was the fifth child in his family. He was educated in the public schools of Peacham and Cabot, Vt., and came to Lowell when he was 12 years of age. Upon arriving in Lowell, he entered the employ of the Tremont & Suffolk mills, and after a short while was promoted to section hand in the weave room. He remained at that mill for one year, leaving there to take up a similar position in the Appleton mills, where he remained until 1851.

In January, 1852, Lucy F. Flint of Walden, Vt., came down to Lowell and was united in marriage with Mr. Brickett, the ceremony being performed in the Highland Congregational church in 1854. Mrs. Brickett became ill, so she and her husband removed to Cabot, Vt., where they purchased a farm, and lived there for 18 years, returning to Lowell at the end of that time. After coming back to Lowell, Mr. Brickett conducted a corporation boarding-house for the Tremont & Suffolk mills for over four years, when he disposed of his boarding-house and opened a coal and wood yard at 6 Fletcher street. In addition to running this business, he also did considerable building. In 1896 he retired from the coal and wood business but continued in the building business until 1914.

Two children were born to the couple: Leroy A., who died when 17 years of age, in 1873; and a daughter, Emma M. She married Charles F. Robinson and it is she who is now seriously ill at her home in Boston. She has one son, George Edmund Robertson, a graduate of Cornell college and a master mechanic in the employ of Mead, Morse & Co., in East Boston. He in turn has two children, a boy 5 months old and a girl 5 years old.

The first Mrs. Edmund Brickett lived until 1914, dying at the age of 82 years. Mr. Brickett married again four years ago, his second wife being Mary Goodwin of Windham, N. H., who is still living.

Mr. Brickett has not allowed age to keep him from enjoying present day amusements and conveniences. He likes a good show and manages to see one once in a while. A trip to Boston to see his daughter is nothing unusual, and every year he goes to Vermont to see the few relatives that are still living and to keep in touch with his home town. He hears as plainly as ever, talks well, remembers things back in the early days, and is able to read without glasses.

He attributes his good health and happy old age mainly to the fact that he has always, up to nine years ago, worked hard, and he never used tobacco nor liquor. He is thoroughly modern in his opinions, and believes that every man should work no more or less than eight hours a day, and six days a week, if he wants to be happy and live to a good old age.

One thing that strikes Mr. Brickett as a retrogression rather than an advance in modern life is the lack of attendance at church and his opinion is that the folks who used to go to church on Sundays now go out to drink. He can remember well when the Westminster street church was filled to overflowing and when they used to take 20 or 30 down to the river outside to baptize them. Mr. Brickett was drafted for service in the Civil war but was thrown out after a physical examination, and he considers this quite a joke at most of the men were seemingly healthier than he is now dead.

ONE SOLDIER KILLED

Two Others Captured in Fighting Against Shantung Train Bandits

TIENTSIN, May 25.—(By the Associated Press)—One soldier was killed and two captured in fighting yesterday against the Shantung train bandits, according to a telegram from Tientsin.

It is believed farmers also joined in the fighting to protect their crops from marauders.

Rev. William F. Mahan, O. M. L., chaplain of the Lowell post of the American Legion, expects that fully 25,000 persons will be present at the outdoor mass on the South common on the morning of Memorial day. The mass, in a solemn high, will have as celebrant, Very Rev. Lawrence F. Fisher, O. M. L., pastor of the Immaculate Conception church, assisted by Rev. Daniel J. Heffernan, acting pastor of St. Peter's, as deacon, and Rev. William F. Drennan of St. Margaret's, as sub-deacon. Rev. Fr. Drennan was an overseas chaplain during the war.

Music will be furnished by a choir of 300 mixed voices under the direction of Mr. John J. Kelly. The altar, now under construction, will be situated in the wading pool on the common, a very picturesque spot. Special seats near the altar will be reserved for gold star mothers, the clergy and members of the city government. Outside the special area, reservations will be made by the veterans and semi-military organizations, while the public will form outside a wire fence.

Members of Battery B will do police duty, and at the elevation of the hour, drums will roll and bugles blow.

The committee in charge of the mass is composed of Rev. William F. Mahan, O. M. L., chairman; Capt. Geo. F. Paine, Lieut. Richard D. Donoghue and Lieut. Robert F. Givins.

On the evening of Thursday, May 24, demonstration of first aid work will be given by the New England Telephone & Telegraph company at the Memorial Auditorium in the form of a championship contest of five teams of employees representing the cities of Hingham, Brockton, Lawrence, Gloucester and Marlborough, under the supervision of Dr. Daniel L. Lynch, medical director of the company.

The telephone company for the past few years has been making capital progress in first aid work among its employees. Great interest has been manifested and rivalry developed to the extent that contests have been necessary to determine to just whom the honors belong. Elimination contests have been held and the five victorious teams are to compete at the Auditorium on the evening of May 24 to determine the championship of the Eastern Massachusetts division, which comprises the territory of the Merrimack valley, North Shore, Framingham and Cape sections. Unfortunately in the elimination contests our Lowell team was defeated by a very narrow margin and by their natural rival, the Lawrence team.

The whole floor of the Auditorium will be available for the contest, all five teams competing at the same time. A full view of all teams competing can be obtained from all seats in the parquet circle and balcony. The spirit of fairness of the telephone company is demonstrated in the selection of the following capable Lowell physicians to act as judges of the contest: Dr. M. L. Larabee, A. R. Gardner, H. H. Plun, L. C. M. Roughan, J. E. Martin and R. A. Robertson.

Another feature of the evening will be the presentation of two Vail medals recently awarded by the telephone company to Miss Olga Wokanda (Mrs. Duthie Hamilton) of Lowell and Miss Elizabeth M. Lonsdale of Lawrence, for their service in accomplishing the capture recently of a murderer. The presentation of these medals will be made by one of the officials of the company while the judges are tabulating their score of the contest.

The first aid contest will consume approximately one and one-half hours, and will be followed by general dancing. Williams Bros., orchestra of New Bedford, will be in charge of the music. The contest of the telephone company will furnish the music and they are favorably known throughout New England as masters of jazz music.

Twenty-five young ladies of the Lowell office will officiate as ushers in the uniform of the Red Cross. It is expected that a large number of the "Red Cross" girls will be present.

It is planned that in the near future a contest for the entire company will be held in Mechanics hall, Boston. The exhibition is free to the public and will commence at 8 o'clock sharp.

MACHINISTS' UNION HOLDS MEETING
A feature of last evening's meeting of Lodge 145, Machinists' union, which was held in Trades and Labor hall, was the appointment of a committee to canvass the members of the organization relative to the life insurance policies, which the grand lodge is offering to the members between the ages of 15 and 60 years of age.

Three policies consist of $500 benefits in case of death at the rate of $8 a year, and it is said that they are being generally approved by the members of the union. Other lodges have adopted the system, it is said, and are very much satisfied with it.

The meeting was presided over by President P. Murphy and considered business was transacted. It was voted to start an executive membership card in an endeavor to enlist under the banner of the organization all the machinists employed in local shops and in order to help the campaign committee, the union voted to have an open charter for three months, initiation and reinstatement fees being set at 75 cents.

The special anniversary of the union was celebrated on May 19th was called off. There was an assessment made up for the benefit of strikes in progress. The lodge voted to hold a meeting in the near future and a committee was appointed to make arrangements for the event.

CHARGE CARSHOP MAN WITH LARCENY

A warrant was issued to officers of the Boston & Maine railroad police today for a resident of Melrose, an employee of the Billerica car shops, who, it is claimed, has been taking material from the carshops in Billerica for some time.

Lieut. Arthur A. Ayseough and Inspector Cole of the B. & M. police, and Lieut. Inspector Pahey and Officer Eaton and the Melrose police yesterday procured a search warrant and searched this man's house and found a number of blankets, sheets, pillows, chisels, and a variety of other articles valued at about $100, which they say were taken from the car shops. As a result of their find, the railroad police appeared in the clerk of court's office this morning and swore out a warrant. This warrant will not be served as they believe the man will answer a summons to appear in the local court next Monday, but if by any chance he does not appear, the warrant will be ready for his arrest.

Only the warrant is served on the man appears in court here, he does not come under the court's jurisdiction so his name can not be made public, but Clerk Trull acknowledged that the warrant had been issued and that he would be summonsed into court next Monday.

"WORLD FULL OF MENACE"—DENBY

Secretary Warns That Navy Must Be Kept Ready For Defense

Great Need for Close Study of Naval Science and Earnest Devotion to Duty

NEWPORT, R. I., May 25.—Warning that the navy must be kept ready for defense, "in a world full of menace," was given by Secretary Denby in an address today to the graduating class of the Naval War college. At no time in the nation's history, he added, had there been greater need for "close study of naval science and earnest devotion to duty."

"It is a day when naval strength is vitally necessary and a full grasp by naval officers of the world possibilities highly important," Mr. Denby continued. "We think in terms of hope for continued peace; we strive through diplomacy, backed by power, to keep that desired peace, but we must not be blind to facts."

"We know now beyond peradventure that war between great powers groups of powers will always involve many other nations, and we cannot say with certainty that such a war may not come at any time. There need be no demand for excessive armament. There will be none for great increase of our present establishment made by the navy department at the coming session of congress. We shall ask for additional cruisers, allowed under the treaty for the limitation of armament. We shall ask for additional light draft gunboats, the vital need of which is being demonstrated every day; and we shall ask for certain submarines and airplanes."

"There will be nothing extravagant in our recommendations to congress; and we hope to be able to keep the proposed appropriations approximately within the limits reached last year. Therefore, we do not anticipate the need of a great building program, we do realize that what we have must be in constant readiness for effective use."

The secretary referred to such controversies between branches of the service as that between advocates of aviation and the capital ship as often "unnecessary and misleading."

There should be no belittling of the scope and power of the various arms of our sea forces, he declared, "no exaggeration of one at the cost of another. On the other hand, there should be no lessening in the supply and development and full supply of all new arms."

AN EXCELLENT CONCERT MEMORIAL DAY PARADE

Normal School Girls' Glee Club and Orchestra at the Auditorium

The girls' glee club and orchestra of the State Normal school combined their talent last evening to present a most enjoyable concert at the Memorial Auditorium before a friendly audience that was larger numerically than might have been anticipated for this season of the year.

To hold this annual event outside of the school was a new departure, but it worked out so successfully that undoubtedly such a plan will be followed in future years.

The glee club was assisted by the following soloists: Mrs. Florence Schroeder, soprano; Miss Doris Sweet and Miss Helen Ragsdale, pianists; and Miss Catherine Eaton and Miss Ruth Ward, violinists.

The concert was given under the capable direction of Miss Inez Field Darnon, head of the department of music.

In many respects the program given was worthy of commemoration. It did not follow the trend of programs usually given by school organizations, in fact, departed radically from it. To include works by such composers as Cussler, Frank, Beethoven, Cadman, Chabulke, Elgar, Morley and Korsakoff Kreisler.

The glee club sang splendidly as a body and throughout showed a keen sense of proper shading, and well rounded tone when the text demanded. The work of the several soloists was distinctly high grade, the mezzo-soprano voice of Mrs. Schroeder being notable for its clearness and beauty.

The members of the glee club are: First soprano—Estelle Doran, Grace Finnegan, Dorothy Graham, Violet Hobson, Edna Lawrence, Mary Martin, Margaret McKeeney, Anna Noonan, Margaret Reynolds, Anastasia Shea, Angela Sheehan, Verona Tierney.

Second soprano—Mildred Benson, Gladys Lindley, Blanche Harrington, Ruth McGraw, Agnes Noble, Frances Richardson, Florence Schroeder, Rita Seilly, Marian Smith.

First alto—Cecilia Bartlett, Esther Carlson, Esther Fahy, Marion Garvey, Kathleen Hart, Mildred Murray, Rina Spencer, Alberta Waterhouse, Margaret Wood, Ruth Whitton.

Second alto—Ruth McAdams, Edna Palmer, Rose Portek, Katherine Butler, Agnes Roush, Lillian Salove, Marion Shine, Catherine Sullivan.

The orchestra is composed of the following students: First violins, Edna Lawrence and Ruth Ward; second violins, Josephine O'Neil and Katherine Kearney; first cornet, Emma Brennan; second cornet, Mrs. Schaefer; trombone, Thomas Russell; bells, Alice Kelly; drums, Violet Hobson; piano, Doris Sweet.

Poppy Day in Lowell
by and under the direction of Walter Rogers, post 62, assisted by nearly 60 tea girls and a committee of the women's auxiliary attached to the post. Bright red poppies, symbols of the red blood of all nations spilled on the battlefields of France during the days of strife, are being sold on every street corner and in all downtown buildings and the response this forenoon was most generous. Few there were who declined to purchase a flower and in many cases two instances it was a silver coin that was dropped into the tin container.

The committee of the local post in charge of the arrangements for Poppy day pointed out this forenoon that the poppies cost three cents each, and unless each gift is more than that the receipts and profits will not be large.

About 40 young women were on the streets selling the flowers by means of a flower stand, and their numbers were increased by nearly a score in the afternoon.

Headquarters for the day are in Memorial hall, where a committee of the post and one from the auxiliary cared for all details. The personnel of the post committee is: Commanding Officer, David P. Caddell, Senior Vice Commander, Frank E. Hart, Adj. William C. Kipp, Thomas W. Vickers, Leo Krueger and John Shedd.

DOG BITES LITTLE GIRL
A rather peculiar dog bite case was brought to the attention of the police yesterday afternoon when it was reported that the five-year-old daughter of George Sabersky of 50 Adams street, was bitten on the nose by a dog which was being cared for by Albert Leary of 78 Adams street. The girl, according to the report, was playing and not paying the slightest attention to the dog when it jumped up and bit her. The dog was taken by the police and placed in quarantine to determine whether or not it is afflicted by the rabies.
